THE DOWN-FALL of Robert, Earle of Huntington.

Enter sir John Eltam, and knocke at Skelton's doore.
Sir John.

Howe, maister Skelton! what art thou i' hand?
Opens the doore,
Skel. Welcome, and wylst for, honest sir
John Eltam. I haue seen twice, & either time he mist, that went to seeke you.

Elt. So full well hee might.
These two howers it pleas'd his Maiestie
To vse my seruice in suruaing Dappes,
Sent ouer from the good king Ferdinand,
That to the Indies, at Sebastian's lute,
Hath lately lent a Spanish Colonie.
Sk. Then twill trouble you, after your great affaires,
To take the paine that I intended to intreat you to,
About rehearsal of your promis'd play.

Elt. Nay maister Skelton: for the king himselfe,
As wee were parting, bid mee take great heed
Wee faile not of our day, therefore I pray
Sende for the rest, that now we may rehearse.

Skel. O they are readie all, and drest to play.
What part play you?

Elt. Why? I play little John,
And came of vnruse with this greene lute.

TO MINT
A MINT

THE CLOWN

Skel. Holla my masters, little John is come.

At every doore all the Players runne out, some crying where? where? others welcomme sir John, among other the boyes and Clowne.

Skel. Faith little Tracy you are somewhat forward:
What, our Maid Marian leaping like a lad?
If you remember, Robin is your loue:
Sir Thomas mantle yonder, not sir John.

Clow. But master, sir John is my fellowe, for I am Much, the Millers sonne. Am I not?

Sk. I know yee are sir:
And gentlemen, since you are thus prepar'd,
Goe in, and bring your dumbe scene on the stage,
And I, as Prologue, purpose to expresse
The ground whereon our histoyre is laid.

Exeunt, manet Skelton.

Trumpets sounde, enter first king Richard with drum and Auncient, giuing Ely a purse and scepter, his mother, and brother John, Chester, Lester, Lacie, others at the kings appointment doing reverence. The king goes in: presently Ely ascends the chaire, Chester, John, and the Queene passe displeasantly. Enter Robert, earle of Huntington, leading Marian, followes him Warman, and after Warman the Prior, Warman euer flattering and making curtie, taking gifts of the Prior behinde, and his master before. Prince John enters, offereth to take Marian. Queen Elinor enters, offering to pull Robin from her; but they infolde each other, and sit downe within the curtaines; Warman with the Prior, sir Hugh Lacy, Lord Senglow, & sir Gilbert Broghion folde hands, and drawing the curtaines, all(but the Prior) enter, and are kindly received by Robin Hood. The curtaines are againe shut.
Sk. Sir John, once more, bid your dumbe shewes come in;

That

Earle of Huntington.

That as they pass I may explane them all.

¶ Enter king Richard with drumme and Ensigne, giuing
Ely a purse, and scepter, his mother and brother John,
Chester, Lester, Lacie, others at the kings appointment, doing reverence. The king goes in.

Richard calde Cor de Lyon takes his leaue,
Like the Lords Champion gaint the Pagan foes,

That spoyle Iudea, and rich Palestine.

The rule of England and his princely seate,

He leaues with Ely, then Lord Chancelour:

To whom the mother Queene, her sonne, prince John,

Chester, and all the Peere, are swoyne,

Exit Richard cum milicibus.

¶ Ely ascends the chaire, Chester, John and the Queene part displeasantly.

Now reverend, Ely like the deputie
Of Gods greate deputie ascends the thone:
Which the Queene mother, and ambitious John
Repining at, rail'd many mutinies;
And how they ended you anone shall heare.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Robert, earle of Huntington, leading Marian, followes him Warman, and after Warman the Prior, War-man ever flattering, and making curtie, taking giftes of the Prior behinde, and his master before. Prince John enters, offereth to take Marian, Queene Elinor enters, offering to pull Robin from her; but they insolde each other, and hit downe within the curtaine,

This youth that leads you virgin by the hand
(As doth the Sunne, the mooring richly clad)
Is our Earle Robert, or your Robin Hoode,
That in those daies, was Earle of Huntington.

A 3.

The

The ill fact miser, byb'd in either hand,
Is Warman, once the Steward of his house,
Who ludas like betraies his liberall Lord,
Into the hands of that relentlesse Prior,
Calde Gilbert Hoode, uncle to Huntington:
Those two that seeke to part these louely friends,
Are Elenor the Queene, and Iohn the Prince,
She loues earle Robert, he marde Marian,
But vainely: for their deare affect is such,
As only death can funder their true loues.
Long had they lou'd, and now it is agreed,
This day they must be troth-plight, after wed,
At Huntingtons faire house a feast is helde;
But enuie turnes it to a house of teares.
For those false guestes, conspiring with the Prior,
To whome earle Robert greatly is in debt,
Meane at the banquet to betray the Earle,
Unto a heauie wyt of outlawry.
The manner and escape you all shall see.

Elt. Whiche all, good Skelton?
Skel. Why all these lookers on:
Whom if wee please, the king will sure be pleas'd.
Looke to your entrance, get you in sir Iohn. Exit sir Iohn.
My shifte is long, for I play Frier Tucker.
Wherein if Skelton haue but any lucke
Heele thanke his hearers oft, with many a ducke.
For many talk of Robin Hood y never shot in his bowe,
But Skelton writes of Robin Hood what he doth truly.

Therefore I pray yee, (knowe.
Contentedly stay yee,
And take no offendynge,
But sit to the ending.
Likewise I desire,
Yea would not admire
My rime so I shifte.

Earle of Huntington.

For this is my drift,
So mought I well thrive,
To make yee all blithe:
But if ye once frowne,
Pooze Skelton goes downe,
His labour and cost,
He thinketh all lost,
In tumbling of booke
Of Mary goe lookes.
The Sheriffe with staves,
With catchpoles and knaves,
Are comming, I see,
High time tis for mee
To leauue off my babble
And sond ribble rabble.
Therefore with this curtse
A while I will leauue yee.

Enter, as it were in haste, the Prior of Yorke, the Sheriffe, Justice Warman, Steward to Robin Hood.
Pri. Here master Warman, theres a hundred crowns,
For your good will and furtherance in this.
War. I thanke you my Lord Prior, I must away
To shunne suspicioa, but be resolute,
And wee will take him, haue no doubt of it.

Pri. But is Lord Sentloe and the other come? (con-
War. Lord Sentloe, sir Hugh Lacie, & sir Gilbert Brogh.
Are there, and as they promist you last night,
Will helpe to take him, when the Sheriffe comes.

Pri. A while fare well, and thankes to them & you.
Come master Sheriffe, the outlawry is proclaim'd,
Sende therefore quickly for more companie,
And at the backe gate wee will enter in.

Sher. Wee shall haue much adoe I am afraide.

Pri. No, they are very merry at a feast,

The down-fall of Robert

A feast, where Marian, daughter to Lord Lacy,
Is troth-plighted to wallfull Huntington.
And at the feast, are my especiall friends,
Whom hee suspectes not: come weele haue him, man,
And for your paines, here is a hundred markes. Exeunt.
Sher, I thanke your Lordshippe, weele be diligent.

Enter Robin Hood, little John following him; the one earle of Huntington, the other his seruant, Robin having his napkin on his shoulder, as if hee were sodain-ly raised from dinner.

Robin. As I am outlawed from my same and state,
Be this day outlawed from the name of daies;
Day lucklesse, outlawe lawlesse, both accurst,

John. Flings away his napkin, hat, and sitteth downe.
John. Doe not forget your honourable state,
Nor the true noblesse of your worthy house.

Rob. Doe not persuade mee: vaine as vanitie
Are all thy comforts, I am comfortlesse.

John. Hearre mee my Lord.

Rob. What shall I hearre thee say?
Alreadie hast thou said too much to heare.
Alreadie hast thou stabd mee with thy tongue,
And the wide wound with words will not be clos'd.
Am I not outlawed, by the Prior of Rose,
Proclaim'd in Court, in citie, and in towne,
A lawlesse person? this thy tongue report's:
And therefore seeke not to maki smooth my griefe:
For the rough stome, thy windie words hath rais'd,
Will not be calm'd, till I in graue be laid.

John. Haue patience yet.

Rob. Yea, nowindeede thou speakest.
Patience hath power to heare a greater crosse
Then honours spoyle, or any earthly losse.
John. Doe so my Lord.

Rob.

Earle of Huntington.

Rob. I now I would beginne:
But see, another Scene of griefe comes in.

Enter Marian.

Mar. Why is my Lord so sad? Wherefore so soone,
So sodainely arose pee from the boozde?
Glas my Robin, what distempering griefe
Drinke up the roseat colour of thy cheeke's:
Why art thou silent? answe mee my loue.

Rob. Let him, let him, let him make thee as sad.
Vee hath a tongue can banishe thee from joy,
And chale thy crimson colour from thy cheeke's.
Why speakest thou not? I pray thee little John,
Let the shor storie of my long distresse
Be uttered in a word. What mean'st thou to protract?
Wilt thou not speake? then Marian lise to mee.
This day thou werst a maide, and now a spowse,
Anone (ppoze soule) a widdowe thou must bee:
Thy Robin is an outlawe, Marian,
His goods and landes must be extended on,
Himselfe exilde from thee, thou kept from him,
She sinkes in his armes.

By the long distiance of unnumbred miles:
Faint'st thou at this? speake to mee Marian,
My olde loue newly met, parte not so soone,
We haue a litle time to tarry yet.

Mar. If but a litle time, let mee not stay,
Part wee to day, then will I dye to day.

John. For shame my Lord, with courage of a man,
Bidle this ouer-greeuing passion,
Or else dissemble it, to comfort her.

Rob. I like thy counsell, Marian, cleare these clouds,
And with the sunny beames of thy bright eyes,
Drinke up these mistes of sorrowe that arise.

Mar. How can I joy, when thou art banished?

Rob. I tell thee loue, my griefe is counterfaite;

B

And

The down-fall of Robert

And I abruptly from the table rose,
The banquet being almost at an ende,
Onely to dñe confused and sad thoughts
Into the mindes of the invited guestes.
For gentle loue, at greate or nuptiall feastes,
With Comicke sportes, or Tragick stately plaiers,
Wee vse to recreate the feasted guestes,
Which I am sure our kinsfolke doe expect.

Mar. Of this what then? this seemes of no effect.

Rob. Why thus of this, as little Iohn can tell,
I had bespoken quaint Comedians:
But greate Iohn, Iohn the Prince, my Lieges brother,
My riuall, Marian, he that cost our loue,
Hath cost mee in this iest, and at the Court,
Imployes the Players, shoule haue made vs spoyt;
This was the tydings brought by little Iohn,
That first disturb'd mee, and begot this thought
Of sodaine eysing, which by this I know
Hath with amazement, troubled all our guestes:
Goe in, good loue, thou as the Chorus shalt,
Exprese the meaning of my silent griefe,
Which is no moxe but this; I only meane
(The moxe to honour our right noble friends)
My selfe in person, to present someoceanes
Of tragick matter, or periance of mirth,
Euen such as first shall iumpe with my conceipt.

Mar. May I be bolde thou hast the worst exprest?
John, Faire mistresse, all is true my Lord hath said.

Rob. It is, it is.

Mar. Speake not so hollow then,
So sigh, and sadly speake true sorrowing men.

Rob. Beleeue mee loue, beleeue mee (I beseech)
My first Scene tragick is, therefore tragick speech,
And accents fitting wofull action, I strive to get:
I pray thee sweete goe in, and with thy sight,

An.

Appeale the many doubts that may arise.
That done, be thou their usher, bring them to this place,
And thou shalt see mee with a loftie verse,
Bewitch the hearers eares, and tempt their eyes
To gaze vpon the action that I vse.

Mar. If it be but a play, Ile play my part:
But sure some earnest griefe affrights my heart.

John. Let mee intreate yee Madam not to feare,
For by the honestie of little John,
Its but a tragiche Scene we haue in hand,
Only to sicke the humour of the Queene,
Who is the chiefeest at your troth-plight feast.

Mar. Then will I fetch her Hignesse and the rest.

Rob. I, that same lealous Queene, whose doting age
Envies the choyce of my faire Marian,
She hath a hande in this.

John. Well, what of that?
Now must your honour leaue these mourning tunes,
And thus by my areede you shall prouide;
Your Plate and Jewels Ile straight packe vp,
And toward Notingham conuey them hence,
At Rowsford, Sowtham, Wortley, Hothersfield:
Of all your cattell, mony shall be made,
And I at Mansfield will attend your comming,
Where weele determine, which wifes best to take.

Rob. Well be it so, a Gods name let it be:
And if I can, Marian shall come with mee.

John. Else care will kill her, therfore if you please,
At th'utmost corner of the garden wall,
Soone in the euering waite for Marian,
And as I goe Ile tell her of the place,
Your horses at the Bell shall readie bee,
I meane Bellavage, whence as citizens
That meant to ride for pleasure some small way,
You shall set foorth.

SIT DOWNE TALL OF RODDIT

Rob. Well as thou dost say.
Farewell a whille.
In spight of gries, thy lone compels mee smiler
But now our audience comes, wee must loske sad.
Exit John.

¶ Enter Queen Elinor, Marian, Senlou, Lacie, Brogh-ton, Warman, Robins steward. As they meete, John whispers with Marian.

Que. How now my Lord of Huntington?
The mistresse of your loue, faire Marian,
Tels vs your sodaine rising from the banquet,
Was but a humoz, which you meane to purge,
Insome high Tragickie lines, or Comick iestes.
Ro. Sit downe faire Queen (y Prologues part is plain, Marian hath tolde yee, what I had her tell)
Sit downe Lord Senlou, colin Lacy sit,
Sir Gilbert Brogheton, pea, and Warman sit;
Though you my steward be, yet soz your gathering wit,
I give you place, sit downe, sit downe I say,
Sets them all downe.

Gods pittie sit; it must, it must be so:
For you will sit, when I shall stande I knowe.
And Marian (you) may sit among the rest,
I pray yee vose, or else rise, stand apart,
These helpe shall be beholders of my smart.
You that with ruthlesse eyes my sorowes see,
And came prepar'd to feast at my sad fall,
Whose envie, greedinesse, and tealouise
Afforde mee sevrowe endlesse, comfort small,
Knowe what you knewe before, what you ordaind
To crosse the spousall banquet of my loue,
That I am outlawed by the Prior of Roseke,
My traiterous uncle, and your trothlesse friend.

Smile.

EATLE OF Huntington.

Smile you Queene Elinor? laugh st thou Lord Sentloe?
Lacy look st thou so blithe at my lament?
Broughton a smooth browe graceth your sterne face:
And you are merry Warman at my mone.
The Queene except, I doe you all defie.
You are a sort of lawning Sycophants,
That whyle the sun shone of my greatnessse dur'd;
Reueld out all my day for your delights,
And now yee see the blacke night of my woe
Dreshade the beautie of my smiling good,
You to my grieve adde grife, and are agreed
With that false Prior, to reprise my ioyes
From execution of all happinessse.

War. Your honour thinks not ill of mee, I hope.

Rob. Iudas speakes first, with, master is it I?
No, my fasse Steward, your accounes are true,
You haue dishonoured mee, I worshipt you.
You from a paltry pen and inkhoerne clarke,
Bearing a buckram latchell at your belt,
Unto a Justice place I did preferre,
Where you vnjustly haue my tenants rackt,
Wasted my treasure, and increast your store.
Your lire contented with a cottage pooze,
Your masterhippe hath halles and mansions built,
Yet are you innocent, as cleare from guilt,
As is the rauenous mastife that hath spilt
The blode of a whole flocke, yet lily comes
And couches in his kennell, with simeard chaps,
Out of my house, for yet my house it is,
And followe him yee catchpole hribed groomes:
For neither are ye Lords, nor Gentlemen,
That will be hired to wrong a Nobleman:
For hiss fee were, last night, I knowe it I,
To be my guests, my faithlesse guyltes this day,
That your kinde hoste you trichlesse might betray;

But hence, and helpe the Sheriffe at the doore,
Your worst attempt; sell traitors, as you bee,
Quoide, or I will execute yee all,
 Ere any execution come at mee, Runne away.
They ran away, so ends the tragedie.

Marian, by little John, my minde you know,
If you will, doe: if not, why, be it so. Offers to goe in.

Qu. No words to me earle Robert ere you goe?
Rob. To your Highnesse? yes, adieu proud Queene,
Had not you bene, thus poore I had not beene. Exit.

Qu. Thou wrongst mee Robert, earle of Huntington,
And were it not for pittie of this maide,
I would reuenge the words that thou hast said.

Mar. Ade not, faire Queene, distresse unto distresse:
But if you can, for pittie make his lesse.

Que. I can and will forget deseruing hate,
And give him comfort in this wosfull state.
Marian, I knowe Earle Roberts whole desire
Is to haue thee with him from hence awaie;
And though I loued him dearely to this day;
Yet since I see hee dearlier loueth thee,
Thou shalt haue all the furtherance I may.
Tell mee faire girle, and see thou truly tell,
Whether this night, to morrow, or next day,
There be no pointment for to mee te thy loue.

Mar. There is, this night there is, I will not lie,
And be it disappointed, I shall die.

Que. Alas poore soule, my sonne, Prince John my son,
With seuerall troupes hath circuited the Court,
This house, the citie, that thou canst not scape.

Mar. I will away with death, though he be grim,
If they deny mee to goe hence with him.

Qu. Marian, thou shalt go with him clad in my attire,
And for a shifte, Ile put thy garments on,
It is not mee, my sonne John doth desire;

But

Earle of Huntingt on.

But marian it is thee, he voteth on.
When thou and I are come into the field,
Or any other place where Robin sties,
Hie in thy clothes, the ambush will beset,
Thee in my robes they dare not once approach:
So while with me a reasoning they stay,
At pleasure thou with him maist ride away.
Mar. I am beholding to your Maiesty,
And of this plot will sende my Robin worde.

Qu. Nay, never trouble him, least it breed suspect:
But get thee in, and shift of thy attire,
My robe is loose, and it will soone be off,
Goe gentle marian, I will followe thee,
And from betrayer's hands will set thee free.

Mar. I thanke your Highnesse, but I will not trust ye,
My Robert shall haue knowledge of this shift:
For I conceiue alreadie your deepe drift.

Qu. New shall I haue my will of Huntington,
Who taking mee this night for marian,
Will harry mee away in steade of her:
For hee dares not stand triffling to conserue:
Faith prettie marian I shal meete with you,
And with your louely sweete heart Robert too:
For when wee come unto a baiting place,
If with like loue my loue hee doe not grace,
Of treason capitall I will accuse him,
For traitorous forcing me out of the Court,
And guerdon his disdaine with guiltie death,
That of a Prince's loue so lightly weighes. Exit.

¶ Enter little John, fighteing with the Sheriffe and his men,
Warman persuading him.

To Warman stand off, tit tattle, tel not me what ye can do:
The goods I say are mine, and I say true.

War. I say the Sheffise must see them ere they goe.

John

The down-fall of Robert

Ioh. You say so Warman, little John saies no.
Shre, I say I must soz I am the kings Shrieue.
Ioh. Your must is false, your office I beleue.
Watch. Downe with him, downe with him.

John. Ye barke at me like curres, but I will downe
With twentie (stand, and who goe therer) of you,
If pee stand long tempeing my patience.
Why master Shrieue, chynke you mee a foole?

What justice is there you shoule search my trunkes,

Or stey my goods soz that my master owes?

Sher. Here's Justice Warman, steward to your Lord,
Suspects some coyne, some Jewels, or some plate
That longs unto your Lord, are in your trunkes,
And the extent is out soz all his goods:
Therefore wee ought to see none be conuainc'd.

War. True little John, I am the sorier.

John. A plague vpon ye else, how sore ye weep'r
Why, say thou vpstart, that there were some helpe,
Some little little helpe in this distresse,
To aide our Lord and master comfor't else;
Is it thy part, thou screenfa't snotty nose,
To hinder him that gaue thee all thou hast?

Enter Justice Warman's wife, oddly attyred.

Wife. Who's that husband? you, you, means he you?
War. I ber Lady is it, I thanke him.

Wif. Ay kneue you, gods pittie his band, why dis not your worshippe sende the kneue to Newgate?

Ioh. Well master Shritte, shall I passe or no?

Sher. Not without search.

Ioh. Then here the casket stands,
Any, that dares, unto it set their hands,
Let him beginne.

Wif. Doe his band, you are a Maiestie, ywarrant ther's olde knacks, cheins and other toyes.

John. But not soz you good spadam bekle browes.

Wife

Wife. Out upon him. By my trusþ master Justice, and ye doe not clap him vp, I will sue a bill of remorle, and neuer come betweene a pere of sheetes with thee. Such a kneue as this, downe with him I pray.

Seruþon him. He knockes some downe.

Wife. A good Lord, come not neere good his band, only charge him; charge him. A good God, helpe, helpe.

Enter Prince John, the Bishoppe of Ely, the Prior of Yorke, with others. All stay.

P. John. What tumult haue wee here? who doth resist
The kings wights with such obßtinate contempt?

Wife. This knave.

War. This Rebell.

P. John. How now little John,
Haue you no moze discretion than you shewe?
Ely. Lay holde, and clappe the traitor by the heales.

John. I am no traitor, my good Lord of Ely.
First heare mee, then commit me if you please.

P. Joh. Speake and be brieſe.

Joh. Peere is a little boore,
Containing all my gettings twentie yeare;
Whiche is mine owne, and no mans but mine owne:
This they would ralle, this I doe defend,
And about this we only doe contend.

P. Joh. You doe the fellow wrong: his goods are his:
You only must extend upon the Carles.

Prior. That was my Lord; but nowe is Robert Hood,
A ſimple peoman as his ſervantes were.

Wife. Backe with that legge my Lord Prior:
There be ſome, that were his ſervantes, ſhinke ſoule
ſcorne to be cald peomen.

Pri. I cry your worſhippemercy, miſtrelle Warman.
The ſquire your husband was his ſeraant once.

Joh. A ſcurvie ſquire, with reverencē of these Lords.

Wife. Doo's he not speake treason prey.
Ely. Virra, yea are too saucie, get you hence.
Wat. But heare mee first, my Lords, with patience
This scolding careleſſe fellowe, little lohn,
Hath loaden hence a horſe, twirt him and Much,
A ſilly rude knaue, Much the millers ſonne.

Enter Much, clowne.

Much. I am here to anſwer for my ſelſe, and haue taken you in two lies at once. First, Much is no knaue, neither was it a horſe little lohn and I loded, but a little curtaille, of ſome ſtue handfuls high, lib to y Ape onely be all at Parſh garden.

John. But maſter Warman, you haue loded carts,
And turnd my Lords goods to your proper uſe:
Who euer hath the right, you doe the wrong,
And are

Wife. What is hee kneuer?

John. Unworthy to be named a man.

Much. And I le be ſwoyne for his wife,

Wife. I, ſo thou maist Nich.

Much. That theſe ſets newe markes of all my olde Ladies linnen (God reſt her ſoule) & my young Lord ne-
uer haſt them ſince:

Wife. Out, out, I cooke him them but to whiting, as God mende mee.

Ely. Leauē off this idle talke, get yee both hence.

John. I thanke your Honours: wee are not in loue w being here; wee muſt ſecke ſeruice that are maſterkelle.

Exeunt Much, John.

Fly. Lord Prior of Vorke, here's your commiſſion.
You are beſt make ſpede, leaſt in hiſ country houses,
By hiſ appointment, all hiſ heards be ſolde.

Pri. I thanke your Honour, taking hūmble leauē. Exit.

Ely. And maſter VVarman, here's your Patent ſealz,
For the high Scherifewick of Notingham:

C.

Earle of Huntington.

Except the king our master doe repeale
This gift of ours.

P. Ioh. Let him the while possesse it.

Ely. A gods name let him, he hath my good will. Exit.

P. Ioh. Well Warman, this proude Priest I can not
But to our other matter, send thy wife away. (broke.

War. Goe in god wife, the Prince with mee hath private conference.

Wife. By my troth yee will anger mee: now yes haue the Paterne, yee shoulde call mee nothing but mistresse
Sheriffe: for I tell you I stand vpon my replications.

Exit.

P. Ioh. Thinkest thou that Marian meanes
To scape this euening hence with Robin Hoode?
The horse boy tolde mee so, and here he comes,
Disguised like a citizen me thinkes.

Warman lets in, ile sit him presently,
Only for Marian am I now his enemie. Excuse.

Enter Robin like a citizen.

Ro. Earle Iohn & Warman, two good friends of mine:
I thinke they knewe mee not, or if they did
I care not what can followe, I am sure
The sharpest ende is death, and that will come.
But what of death or sorowe doe I dreame?
My Marian, my faire life, my beaucious loue,
Is comming, to giue comfort to my griefe,
And the sly Queene, intending to deceiue,
Hath taught vs how we shold her sleights deceiue.
But who is this? gods pittie, here's a Prince Iohn,
We shall haue some good rule with him anone.

P. Ioh. God eu'en sir: this cleare euening shold portend
Some frost I thinke: how iudge you honest friend?

Rob. I am not weatherwise: but it may be,
We shall haue hard frost: for true charitie,
Good dealing, fauifull friendshyppe, honestie,

The down-fall of Robert

Are chil-colde, deade with colde.

P. Ioh. O good sir, stay.

That frost hath lasted many a bitter day.

Anowe yee no frozen hearts that are belou'd?

Rob. Loue is a flame, a fire, that being mou'd,

Still bighter growes; but say, are you belou'd?

P. Ioh. I would be, if I be not; but passe that;

Are ye a dweller in this citie, pray?

Rob. I am; and for a Gentlewoman stay,

That rides some fourre or five mile in great hast.

Enter Queene, Marian.

P. Ioh. I see your labour, sir, is not in wastle.

For here come two: are either of these yours?

Rob. Both are, one must.

P. Ioh. Which doe you most respects?

Rob. The youngest, and the fairest I relect.

P. Ioh. Robin, I letry you whether yee say true.

Rob. As you with mee, so Iohn ile leasf with you.

Qu. Marian, let me goe first to Robin Hood,

And I will tell him what wee doe intend.

War. Doe what your Highnesse please, your will is

P. Ioh. My mother is with gentle Marian:

O it doth grieue her to be left behinde.

Qu. Shall we away my Robin, leasf the Queene

Betray our purpose, sweete let vs away:

I haue great will to goe, no heart to stay.

Rob. Away with thee: No: get thee farre away

From mee soule marian, faire though thou be nam'd:

For thy bewitching eyes haue raised stormes,

That haue my name and nobleste euer shain'd:

Prince Iohn, my deare friend once, is now, for thee,

Become an vorelencing enemie,

P. Ioh. But ile relent, and loue thee, if thou leaue her.

Rob. And Elinor my Soueraignes mother Queene,

That yet retaines true possyng in her breast,

Standes

Earle of Huntington.

Standis mourning yonder. Hence, I thee detest:
I will submit mee to her Maiestie.
Create Princesse, if you will but ride with mee,
A little of my way, I will expresse
My folly past, and humble pardon beg.
Mar. I grant, earle Robert, and I thanke thee too.
Qu. She's not the Queene, sweets Robin it is I.
Rob. Hence Sorceresse, thy beauty I detest.
If thou hane any loue at all to mee,
Bestowe it on Prince John: he loueth thee.

Exeunt Robin, Marian.

P. loh. And I will loue thee Robin, for this deede,
And helpe thee too, in thy distresfull neede.
Qu. Wilt thou not stay noz speake, proud Huntington?
Ay mee, some whirlwinde hurrie them away.
P. loh. Follow him not faire loue, that from thee flies:
But flie to him that gladly followes thee.
Wilt thou not gide? turnst thou away from mee?
Qu. Nay, we shall haue it then,
If my queint sonne, his mother gin to court.
P. lo. Wilt thou not speake, faire Marian, to prince John,
That loues thee well?
Qu. Good sir I know you doe.
Prin. That can maintaine thee?
Qu. I, I know you can:
But hitherto I haue maintained you.
Prin. My princely mother?
Qu. I, my princely sonne.
Prin. Is Marian then gone hence with Huntington?
Qu. I, she is gone, ill may they either thriue.
Prin. Mother, they must goo whom the diuell dixies,
For your sharpe furie, and infernall rage,
Your scorne of mee, your spite to Marian,
Your ever-doting loue to Huntington,
Hath crost your selfe, and mee it hath undone.

Quer

The down-fall of Robert

Qu. I, in mine owne deceipt, haue met deceipt:
In bries, the manner thus I will repeate;
I knewe, with malice that the Prelor of Poynke
Pursu'd Earle Robert; and I fudred it;
Though God can tell for loue of Huntington.
For thus I thought, when he was in extremes,
Neede, & my loue would winne some good regarde
From him to mee, If I relieu'd his want.
To this end came I to the mock-spouse feast:
To this end made I change for Marians weede,
That me, for her, Earle Robert shoulde receive:
But now I see they both of them agreed,
In my deceipt, I might my selfe deceiue.
Come in with mee, come in and meditate
How to turne loue, to neuer changing hate. Exit.

Prin. In by your selfe: I passe not for your spels.
Of youth and beautie still you are the foe:
The curse of Rosamond rests on your head,
Faire Rose confounded by your cankers hate.
O that he were not as to mee he is,
A mother, whom by nature I must loue,
Then wold I tell her shee were too too base,
To dote thus on a banisht carelesse groome;
Then shold I tell her that shee were too fond,
To chynt faire Marian to an exiles hand.

Enter a messenger from Ely.
Mess. My Lord, my Lord of Ely sends for you,
About important busynesse of the state.
Prin. Tell the proude Prelate I am not dispos'd,
Nor in estate to come at his commaunde.

Smite him, hee bleedes.
Be gon with that, or carry and take this.
Twouns are yee listning for an after-arrant?
I le followe, with reuengefull murozous hate,
The banisht, beggerd, banktow Huntington.

[Enter Simin, earle of Leicester.]

Ley. How now Prince Iohn's bodie of mee, I muse
What mad moodes tolle yee, in this buste time,
To wound the messenger that Ely sent,
By our consents: yfaich yee did not well.

Prin. Leyster, I meant it Ely, noe his man:
His seruants heade but bleedes hee headlesse shall
From all the issues of his traitor necke,
Pourre streames of bloode, till he be bloodlesse left:

By earth it shall, by heauen it shall be so,

Leister, it shall though all the world say no.

Lei. It shall, it shall, but how shall it be done?
Not with a stormie tempest of sharpe words,
But slowe, still speaches, and effecting deedes.
Here comes olde Lacy and his brother Hugh.

One is our friend, the other is not true.

[Enter Lord Lacy, sir Hugh, and his boy.]
Lacy. Hence trechor as thou art: by Gods blessmother
Ile lop thy legges off, though thou be my brother,
If with thy flatring tongue thou seeke to hide
Thy traiterous purpose. Ah poore Huntington,
How in one houre haue villaines thee vdone?

Hugh. If you will not beleue what I haue sworne, Conceipt your wort. My Lord of Ely knowes
That what I say, is true.

La. Still facest thou:
Drawe boy, and quickly see that thou defende thee.

Lei. Patience Lord Lacy, get you gon sir Hugh,
Provoke him not, for he hath tolde you true:
You knowe it, that I knowe the Prior of Yorke,
Together with my good Lord Channellor,
Corrupted you, Lord Senteine, Broghton, Warman,
To feast with Robert on his day of fall.

Hugh. They lie that say it; I desie yee all.
Prin. Now by the Rode thou lyest, Warman himselfe,

That creeping ludas, iþyed, and tolde it mee.

Lacy. Let mee, my Lordes, reuenge me of this wretch,
By whome my daughter and her loue were lost.

Prin. For her, let mee reuenge: with bitter cost,
Shall sir Hugh Lacy and his fellowes buy
Fat're marians losse, lost by their treachery.
And thus I pay it.

Stabs him, he falleth, boy runnes in.

Leist. Hure painment Iohn.

Lacy. There let the villane lie:
For this, olde Lacie honours thee, prince Iohn.
One trecherous soule, is sent to answere wrong.

Enter Ely, Chester, officers, Hugh Lacies boy.

Boy. Here, here, my Lord,
Looke where my master lies.

Ely. What murdrous han hath kilde this gentle knight,
Good sir Hugh Lacy, steward of my lands?

Prin. Ely, he died by this princely hand.

Ely. Unprincely deed. Death askech death you know.

Ely. Arrest hym officers.

Prin. O sir, Ile obey; you will take baile, I hope.

Chest. Tis more, sir, than hee may.

Lei. Chester, he may by lawe, and therefore shall.

Ely. Who are his baile?

Lei. I.

Lacy. And I.

Ely. You are confederates.

Prin. Holy Lord, you lyze.

Chest. Be reverent, Prince Iohn: my Lord of Ely,
You knowe, is Regent for his Maiestie.

Prin. But here are Letters from his Maiestie,
Sent out of Ioppa, in the holy land,
. To you, to chefe, to mee, to all the State;
Containing a reveale of that large graunt,

And

Earle of Huntington.

And free authoritie to take the seale,
Into the hands of thre Lords temporall,
And the Lord Archbischoppe of Roan, he sent.
And hee shall yielde it: or as Lacy lies,
Deserftfully, for pride and treason stabb,
He shall ere long lyfe. Those that intend as I
Followe this steely ensigne, lift on high.

Lifts vp his drawne sword:
Exit, cum Lester and Lacy.

Ely. A thousand thousand ensignes of sharpe Steele,
And feathered arrowes, from the bowe of death,
Against proud Iohn, wrougnd Ely will employ.
My Lord of Chester, let mee haue your aide,
To lay the pride of haute usurping Iohn.

Chest. Some other course than warre let vs bethinke:
If it may be, let not vnciuill broiles,
Our ciuill hands defile.

Ely. God knowes that I,
For quiet of the Realme, would ought forbear:
But give mee leaue, my noble Lord to feare,
When one, I dearely lou'd, is murdered,
Under the colour of a little wrong,
Done to the wastfull earle of Huntington:
Whom Iohn, I knoue, doth hate unto the death,
Only for loue he beares to Lacies daughter.

Chest. My Lord, its platine this quarrel is but pickt
For an inducement to a greater ill:
But wee will call the Counsell of Estate,
At whiche the mother Annee shall present be:
Whither by summons shall Prince Iohn be cald,
Lester and Lacy, who, it seemes,
Fauour some factions purpose of the Prince.
Ely. You haue aduised well, my Lord of Chester,
And as you counsell, so doe I conclude. Exeunt.

The down-fall of Robert

Enter Robin Hood, Matilda, at one doore, little John, and Much the millers sonne at another doore.

Much. Luck I beseech thee, Harry and amen,
Blessing betide hem, it be them indeeve,
Ah my good Lord, for and my little Ladie.

Rob. What? Much and John, well met in this ill time.
John. In this good time my Lord; for being met,
The world shall not depart vs till wee die.

Mat. Haist thou mee so John; as I am true maide,
If I live long, well shall thy loue be pride.

Much. Well, there be on vs, simple though wee stand here, haue as much loue in hem as little John.

Mat. Much, I confesse thou louest mee very much,
And I will moxe reward it than with wordz.

Much. Nay I know that, but wee millers children loue the cogge a little, and the faire speaking.

Rob. And is it possible that Warmans spite
Should stretch so farre, that he doth hunt the lynes,
Of bonnie Scarle, and brother Scathlock.

Much. O, I sir. Warman came but yesterday to take charge of the Taile at Notingham, and this day he saies he will hang the two outlawes: he meanes to set them at libertie.

Mat. Such libertie God send the peiulish wretch
In his most neede,

Rob. Now by my honours hope,
Yet buried in the lowe dust of disgrace,
He is too blame: say John, where must they die?

John. Wonders their mothers house, and here the tree,
Wheron (poore men) they muste orgoe their lynes:
And yonder comes a lazie, lozell Frier,
That is appointed for their confessoz,
Who when we brought your monie to their mothers:
Was wishing her to patience for their deahts.

Enter

Earle of Huntington.

¶ Enter Frier Tucke, and Ralphe, Warmans man.

Ra. I am timorous sir, that the prigioners are passed from the Taile.

Fri. Hoft sirra, by my order I protest,
Ye are too foward: tis no game, no iest
We goe about.

Rob. Matilda, walke afore,
To widowe Scarlers house: looke where it standz:
Much, man your Ladie: litte Iohn and I
Will come unto you thither presently.

Much, Come Madame, my Lord has pointed the properer man to goe befores thee.

Mat. Be carefull Robin in this time of feare,
Exit Much, Matilda.

Fri. Now by the reliques of the holy Passe,
A prettie gircle, a very bonny lass.

Rob. Frier, how like you her?

Fri. Mary, by my hoode,
I like her well, and wish her nought but good.

Rafe. Pee protact master Frier. Obsecrate ye with all curtesie, omitting complement, you would vouch, or deigne to proceede.

Fri. Deigne, vouch, protact, complement, obsecrate
Why good man tricks, who taught you thus to prate?
Your name, your name, were you never christned?

Ra. By nomination Radulfe is or Ralph,
Vulgars corruptly vse to call mee Rafe.

Fri. O soule corruption of base palliardize,
When idios witesse trauell to be wile.

Age barbarous, times impious, men vicious,

Able to vpraise,
Hendeade many daies,
That wonted to praise,
The Rimes and the lates
Of Poets Laureate,

The down-fall of Robert

Whose verle did decorate,
And their lines illustrate
Both Prince and Potentate.
These from their graues,
See asses and knaues,
Base idiot slaues,
With boastings and braynes,
Offer to upstie,
To the heauens hie,
With vaine foolery,
And rude ribaldry.
Some of them write
Of beastly delight,
Suffering their lines,
To flatter these times,
With Pandarisme base,
And lust doe vncase,
From the placket to the pappe;
God send them ill happe.
Some like quaint pedants,
Good wits true recreants,
Yee cannot beseech
From pure Priscian speech.
Divers as nice,
Like thisodde vice,
Are wordmakers daily.
Others in curtisie
Wheneuer they meeete yee,
With newe fashions grecce yee,
Chamgning each congee,
Sometime beneath knee,
With, good sir, parbon mee,
And much more foolerie,
Paltry, and soppyn,
Dissembling knauery:

Pands

Earle of Huntington.

Hands sometime killing,
But honestie missing.
God giue no blessing,
To such base counterfacing.

Ioh. Stoppe master Skelton: whither will you runne?
Fri. Gods pittie sir Iohn Eclam, little Iohn,
I had forgotte my selfe; but to our play.
Come, good man fashions, let vs goe out way,
Unto this hanging busynesse: would, for mee,
Some rescue, or repreue might set them free.

Excunt Frier, Ralph.

Robin. Heardst thou not, little Iohn, y^e Friers speach,
Wishing for rescue, or a quicke repreue?

Ioh. He seemes like a good fellowe, my good Lord.

Rob. He's a good fellowe Iohn, vpon my word.

Lend mee thy horne, and get thee in to Much,
And when I blowe this horne, come both & helpe mee.
Ioh. Take heed my Lord: y^e villane Warman knowls you,
And een to one, he hath a wit against you. (dwelt,

Rob. Fear not: below y^e bridge a poore blind man doth
With him I will change my habit, and disguise,
Only be readie when I call for yee:
For I will sauze their lynes, if it may bee.

Ioh. I will doe what you would immediatly.

Enter Warman, Scarlet, and Scatlock bounde, Frier
Tuck as their confessor, Officers with halberts.

War. Master Frier, be hysle, delay no time:
Scarlet and Scathlock, never hope for life,
Here is the place of execution,
And you must answere lawe, for what is done.

Scar. Well, if there be no remedie, we must:
Thongh it ill seemeth Warman, thou shouldest bee

The down-fall of Robert

No bloodie to pursue our lives thus cruellie.

Scar. Our mother sawd thee frō y gallowes, Warman,
His father did preferre thee to thy Lord:
One mother had wee both, and both our fathers,
To thee and to thy father, were kinde friends.

Fri. Good fellowes, here you see his kindesse ends;
What he was once, hee doth not now consider;
You must consider of your many saines:
This day, in death, your happinesse beginnes.

Scar. If you account it happinelle, good Frier,
To beare vs companie, I you desire:
The more the merrier, wee are honest men.

War. We were first outlaws, then ye prooued theeuers,
And now all carelessly yee scoske at death:
Both of your fathers were good honest men;
Your mother lues, their widowe, in good fame:
But you are scaperhantes, unthristes, villanes knaues,
And as yee liu'd by shifftes, shall die with shame.

Scar. Warman, good wordz, for all your bitter deedz;
I'll speach, to wretched men, is more than needz.

Enter Raphe, running.

Ra. Sir, retire yee, for it hath thus succeeded, the car-nifex, or executor, riding on an ill curall, hath titubated or stumbled, and is now cripplified, with broken or fractred stibards, & sending yon tidings of successe, saith, your selfe must be his deputie.

War. I'll luck; but sirra, you shall serue the turne:
The cordz that binde them, you shall hang them in.

Ra. How are you, sir, of mee opiniated? Not to possesse your seneschalship, or sherualtie, not to be earle of Nottingham, will Ralph be nominated by the base scarvalous vociferation of a hangman.

Enter Robin Hood, like an old man.
Rob. Where is the shrieue, kindefriends? I you beseech,
With his good worshippe, let mee haue some speech.

Fri.

Earle of Huntington.

Fri. Here is the Sheriffe, father, this is hee.
Rob. Frier, good alms, & many blessings thank thee,
Sir, you are welcome to this troublous heere:
Of this daies execution did I heare.
Scarlet and Scathlocke murdered my young sonne,
Mee haue they robb, and helplessly vndoone.
Renenge I would, but I am olde and dy:
Wherfore, sweete master, for saint charitie,
Since they are bound, deliver them to mee,
That for my sons blood, I reueng'd may bee.
Scar. This old man lies, we nere did him such wrong.
Rob. I doe not lie, you wote it too too well,
The deede was such, as you may shame to tell.
But I with all intreats might not preuaile
With your sterre flubborne mindes, bent all to blood.
Shall I haue such reuenge then master Sheriffe,
That with my sonnes losse, may suffice my selfe?

Robin whispers with them.

War. Doe father what thou wilt, for they must die.
Fri. I never heard them toucht with bлоode till now.
War. Notorious villaines, & they made their brags,
The earle of Huntington would saue their lives:
But hee is downe the winde, as all such shall,
That renell, wast and spende, and take no care.
Rob. My horne once winded, I le vnbinde my belt,
Wherat the swords and bucklers are fast tied.
Scath. Thankes to your Honour. Father we confesse,
And were our armes vnbounde, we would vpheave
Our sinfull hands with sorrowing hearts to heauen.
Ro. I will vnbinde you, with the Sheriffes leauue.
War. Doe: helpe him Ralphe; go to them master Frier.
Robin. And as yee blew your horns, at my sons death,
So will I sound your knell, wth my best breath:

Sound his horne.

And here's a blade, that hangeth at my belt,

Shall

The down-fall of Robert
Shall make ye feele in death, what my sonne felt.

¶ Enter little John, Much, Scarlet and Scarblock: Fight: the Frier, making as if he helpt the Sheriff, knockes downe his men, crying, keepe the kings peace.

Ralph. O they must be hangd fother:

Rob. Thy master and thy selfe supply their roomes,
Warman, approach mee not, tempt not my wrath.
For if thou doe, thou diest remedlesse,

War. It is the outlawed earle of Huntington,
Downe with him Frier: oh thou dost mistake.
Fly Ralph, wee die else, let vs raise the shire.

Sheriffe runnes away, and his men.

Fri. Farewell earle Robert, as I am true Frier,
I had rather be thy clarke, then serue the Prior.

Rob. A iolly fellowe, Scarlet knowest thou him?
Scar, Hee is of Yorke, and of Saint maries Cloister:
There where your greddie uncle is Lord Prior.

Much. O murren on ye, haue you two scap't hanging:
Warke yee my Lord, these two followes kept at Barns-dale seauen ycare, to my knowledge, and no man

Rob. Here is no biding masters, get yee in,
Take a short blessing at your mothers hands:
Much, beare them compaie, make Matilda merry:
John and my selfe will followe presently.

John, on a sondaine thus I am resolu'd,
To keepe in Sherewoore, till the kings returne,
And being outlawed, leade an outlawes life.
(Seauen yeares these bythen, being yeomens sons, Lived and scap't the malice of their foes)

How thinkest thou little John of my intent?

John. I like your Honours purpose exceeding well.

Rob. Nay, no moze honour, I pray thee little John:
Henceloth I will be called Robin Hoodc,

Matil

Earle of Huntington.

Matilda shall be my maid Marian,
Come Iohn, friends all, for now beginnes the game:
And after our deserts, so growe our fame. Excunt.

Enter Prince Iohn and his Lorde, with souldiers.
Prin. Now is this Comet shot into the sea,
Or lies like slime, vpon the sullen earth:
Come, he is deade, else shold we heare of him.
Sals. I knowe not what to thinke herein, my Lord.
Fitz. Ely is not the man I tooke him for,
I am afraide wee shall haue worse than hee.
Ioh. Why good Fitzwater, whence doth spring your feare?
Fitz. Him for his pride, we iustly haue suspect:
But prouder climers are about to rise.
Sals. Name them Fitzwater, know you any such?
Ioh. Fitzwater meanes not any thing, I know:
For if he did, His tongue would tell his heart.
Fitz. An argument of my free heart, my Lord,
That lettes the worlde be witnesse of my thought.
When I was caught, true dealing kept the schoole:
Deeds were sworne partners with protestant wordes:
We said and did, chele lay and never meane.
This bystart protestation of no proesse:
This, I beseech you Sir accept my loue;
Commaund mee, vse mee, O you are too blame,
That doe neglectt my euerlastinge zeale,
My deare, my kinde affect: when God can tell,
A sodaine pufte of winde, a lightening flashe,
A bubble on the stearn both longer dure,
Than doth the purpose of their promise bide,
A shame vpon this peevish Apish age,
These crouching hypocrite dissembling times.
Well, well, God rid the Patrones of these crimes,
Out of this land. I haue an inward feare,
This ill, well seeming, sinne, will be bought deare.

The down-fall of Robert

Sals. My Lord Fitzwater is inspir'd I thinke.

Prin. I, with some diuell; let the olde foole doe.

Enter Queen mother, Chester, Sheriff, Kent souldiers.

Qu. From the pursuing of the hatefull Priest,
And bootlesse search of Ely are wee come.

Prin. And welcome is your sacred Majestie.
And Chester welcome too, against your will.

Chest. Unwilling men come not without constrainte:
But uncomplaid comes Chester to this place,
Telling thee John, that thou art much too blame,
To chase hence Ely, Chaunceloy to the king,
To set thy foosteppes on the cloach of state,
And seat thy body in thy brothers throne.

Sals. Who shold succeede the brother, but the brother?
Chest. If one were deade, one shold succeede another.

Qu. My sonne is king, my son then ought toaigne.
Fitz. One sonne is king, the State allows not twaine.

Sals. The subjects many yeares the king haue mist.
Che. But subjects must not chuse what king they haue.

Qu. Richard hath conquer'd kingdomes in the East.
Fitz. A signe hee will not loose this in the West.

Sals. By Salsburies Honour I will follow John.
Chest. So Chester will, to shunne commotion.

Qu. Why John shall be but Richards deputie.
Fitz. To that, Fitzwater gladly doth agree.

And looke to't Lady, minde king Richards louer
As you will answere't, doe the king no wrong.

Qu. Well said old conscience, you keep still one long.

Prin. In your contentious humours noble Lords,
Peeres, and upholders of the English State,
John silent stooide, as one that did awaite
What sentence yee determined for my life?
But since you are agreed that I shall heare
The weightie burthen of this kingdomes state,

Earle of Huntington.

Till the returne of Richard, our dread king:
I doe accept the charge, and thanke you all,
That think me worthie of so great a place.

All. Wee all confirme you Richards deputie.

Sals. Now shall I plague proud Chester.

Qu. Sit youlute Firzwater.

Chest. For peace, I yield to wrong.

Prin. Now olde man, soi your daughter.

Firz. To see wrog rule, my eyes run streams of water;

A noyse within,

Enter a Collier, crying a monster.

Col. A monster, a monster: bring her out Robin, a monster, a monster. (act 2)

Sals. Peace gaping fellowe; knowest thou where thou

Col. Why? I am in Kent, within a mile of Dover.

Hbloud, where I am, peace, and a gaping fellowe.

For all your dagger, wett not for your ging,

I would knocke my whipstocke on your addle head.

Come out with the monster, Robin.

Within. I come, I come, helpe mee he scata.

Col. Ile gee her the lash: come out yee bearded witch.

Bring forth Ely, with a yarde in his hand, and li-then cloath, drest like a woman.

Ely. Good fellowes let mee goe, there's gold to drinke.

I am a man, though in a womans weedes.

Ponders Prince Iohn, I pray yee let mee goe.

Qu. What rude cōpanions haue we yonder Salsbury?

Col. Shall we take his money?

2. Col. No, no; this is the thisele that robb master mighels, and came in like a woman in labour; I warrant yee.

Sals. Who haue yee here, honest colliers?

2. Col. A monster, a monster: a woman with a bearde, a man in a petticoate. A monster, a monster.

Sals. What my good Lord of Ely, is it you?

The down-fall of Robert

Ely is taken, here's the Chaunceloy,

1. Col. Pray God wee be not hangd for this tricke!

Qu. What my good Lord?

Ely. I, I, ambitious Ladie.

Prin. Who, my Lord Chauncelour?

Ely. I, you prouid usurper.

Sals. What, is your surplesse turned to a smock?

Ely. Peace Salsbury, thou changing weather cocke.

Chest. Alas my Lord, I grieue to see this sight.

Ely. Chester, it will be day for this darke night.

Fitz. Ely, thou wert the soe to Huntington.

Robin thou knewest, was my adopted sonne:

O Ely, thou to him wert too too cruell,

With him fled hence Matilda, my faire Jewell:

For their wrong Ely, and thy hantie pride,

I helpt earle John: but now I see thee lowe,

At thy distresse, my heart is full of woe.

Qu. Needes must I see Fitzwaters ouerthowter

John, I affect him not, he loues not thee,

Remooue him John, least thou remooued bee.

Prin. Mother, let mee alone: by one and one,

I will not leauue one, that enuies our good.

My Lord of Salsbury, giue these honest colliers,

For taking Ely, each a hundred markes.

Sals. Come fellowes, goe with mee.

Col. Thanke yee faith: farewell monster.

Exeunt Salsbury, colliers.

Prin. Sheriffe of Kenc, take Ely to your charge,

From Shreene to Shreene, send him to Notingham:

Where Warman, by our Patent, is high Shreene.

There as a traitor let him be close kept,

And to his triall wee will follow straignt.

Ely. A traitor, John?

Pr. Joh. Doe not expostulate.

You at your triall shal haue time to p;ate. Exeunt cū Ely.

Fitz.

Fitz. God for thy pitee, what a time is here?
Pri. Right gracious mother, wold your self & Chester
Would but withdrawe you for a little space,
While I conferre w^t my good Lord Fitzwater.
Qu. My Lord of Chester, will you walke alder
Che. Whether your Highnesse please, thither I will.

Exeunt Chester, Queene.

Prin. Souldiers, attend the person of our mother. Exeunt.
Noble Fitzwater, now wee are alone,
What oft I haue desir'd, I will increate,
Touching Matilda, fled with Huntington.
Fitz. Of her what wold you touch? Touching her flight,
She is fledde hence with Robert, her true knight.
Prin. Robert is outlawed, and Matilda free.
Why through his fault, shold she exiled be?
She is your comfort, all your ages blisse.
Why should your age, so great a comfort misse?
She is all Englands beautie, all her pride.
In forren lands, why shold that beautie bide?
Call her againe Fitzwater, call againe
Guilelesse Matilda, beauties soueraigne.

Fitz. I graunt prince John, Matilda was my joy,
And the faire sunne, that kept old winters frost,
From griping deade the marrowe of my bones.:
And she is gone, yet where she is, God wote,
Aged Fitzwater truly guesseth not:
But where she is, there is kinde Huntington:
With my faire daughter, is my noble sonne.
If he may never be recald againe,
To call matilda backe it is in vaine.

Prin. Living with him, she liues in vittious state,
For Huntington is excommunicate:
And till his debts be paid, by Roines decree,
It is agreed, absolu^te he can not be:
And that can never be. So never wife,

But

But sir a loach'd adulterous beggers life,
Must faire matilda lye: this you may amend,
And winne Prince John your euer dyring friend.

Fitz. As how, as how?
Prin. Cal her from him: bring her to Englands Court,
Wher like faire Phoebe, she may sit as Queene,
Ouer the sacred Honourable maides,
That doe attend the royall Queene, my mother.
There shall shee lieue a Princes Cynthia,
And Iohn will be her true Endimion.

Fitz. By this construction, she should be the Moone,
And you would be the man within the Moone.

Prin. A pleasant exposition, good Fitzwater:
But if it sell so out, that I sell in,
You of my full toyes shoulde be chiefe partaker.

Fitz. Iohn I detie thee: by my Honours hope,
I will not beare this bale indiguster:
Take to thy tooles. Thinkest thou a Noble man
Will be a Pandar to his proper childe?
For what intendst thou else? seeing I knowe,
Earle Clestower daughter is thy married wife.
Come, if thou be a right Planag'ner,
Drawe and defende thee: oh our Ladie helpe
True English Lords, from such a tyrant Lord.
What, doest thou thinke I feare? Nay by the Roode,
Ile loose my life, or purge thy lustfull bloode.

Prin. What my olde Russian, lye at your warden
Vaue at your froward bosomme, olde Fitzwater.

Fight: Iohn falleth. Enter Queene, Chester, Salsbury hastily.

Fitz. O that thou werte not Royal Richards brother,
Thou shouldest here die in presence of thy mother.

John riseth, all compasse Fitzwater; Fitzwater chases.
What is he vp? Nay Lords, then giue vs leaue.

Chest. What meaneſt this rage Fitzwater?
Qu.

Earle of Huntington.

Qu. Lay hands upon the Bedlam, traitorous wretch.

Prin. Nay hate him hence: & heare you old Fitzwater?
See that you stay not five daies in the Realmet
For if you doe, you die remedlesse.

Fitz. Speak Lord, do you confirme what he hath said?

All. He is our Prince, and he must be obayd.

Fitz. Harken earle Iohn, but one word will I say.

Prin. Ioh, I will not heare thee, neither will I stay.

Thou knowest thy time. Exit.

Fitz. Will not your Highnesse heare?

Qu. No: thy Matilda robb mee of my deare. Exit.

Fitz. I aided thee in battell Salsbury, sall, Prince Iohn is nowr'd, I dare not stay with thee.

Fitz. Gains't thee and Ely, Chester, was I foe?

And dost thou stay to aggrauate my woe?

Chest. No, good Fitzwater, Chester doth lament

Thy wrong, thy sodaine banishment.

Whence grue the quarrell twixt the Prince and thee?

Fitz. Chester, the diuell tempted old Fitzwater,

To be a Pandar to his only daughter,

And my great heart (impatient) forst my hand,

In my true Honour's right to chalenge him:

Alas the while, wrong will not be reproou'd.

Chest. Farewell Fitzwater: wheresoere thou bee,

By letters, I beseech thee, send to mee. Exit.

Fitz. Chester, I will, I will.

Heauens turme, to good, this woe, this wrong, this ill-

Enter Scathlocke and Scarlet, winding their hornes at seuerall doores. To them enter Robin Hoode, Matilda

all in greene, Scathlockes mother, Much, little John, all the men with bowes and arrowes.

Rob. Widowe, I wish thee homeward now to wend:

Least Warmans malice woxke thee any wrong.

The down-fall of Robert

Wid. Master I will, and mickle good attorney
On thee, thy loue, and all these yeomen strong.

Marc. Forget not widow, what you promise mee.

Much. O I mistresse, for gods sake lets haue linnen.

Wid. You shall haue linnen sent you by all speede.

Honne farewell, and by your mothers reede,

Loue well your master; blessing euer fall.

On him, your mistresse, and these yeomen tall. Exe.

Much. God be with you mother, haue much minde I pray on Much, your sonne, and your daughter linnen.

Rob. Wind once more, folly huntmen, all your horns;

Whose shrill sound, with the echoing woods assit,

Shall ring a sad knell for the fearefull Deere,

Before our feathered shafts, deathes winged darts,

Bring sodaine summons for their fatall ends.

Scar. Its ful seauen years since we were outlawed first,
And wealthy Sherewood was our heritage:

For all those yeares we raignd uncontrolde:

From Barnsiale shrogs, to Notinghams red clifffes,

At Blithe and Tickhill were we welcome guests,

Good George a Greene at Bradford was our friend,

And wanton Wakefields Pinner lou'd vs well.

At Barnsley dwells a Potter tough and strong,

That never brok, we brechien shoud haue wrong.

The Nunnes of Farnsfield, pretty Nunnes they bee,

Gaue napkins, shirts, and bands to him and mee.

Bateman of Kendall, gaue vs Kendall green,

And Sharpe of Lee des, sharpe arrowes for vs made:

At Rotheram dwelt our bowyer, God him blisse,

Jackson he hight, his bowes did never misse.

This for our good, our scathe let Scathlocke tell,

In merry Mansfield, how it once besell.

Scath. In merry Mansfield, on a wrestling day,

Prizes there were, and yeomen came to play:

My brother Scarlet and my selfe were twaines

Many

Earle of Huntington.

Many resisted, but it was in vaine,
For of them all we wonne the mastery,
And the gilt wreathes, were giuen to him and mee.
There by sir Doncaster of Hethersfield,
Wee were bewrayed, beset, and forst to yeld:
And so borne bound, from thence to Notingham,
Where we lay doom'd to death, till Warman came.
Rob. Of that enough. What cheere my dearest loue?
much. O good cheare anone sir, she shall haue bensou her bellyfull.

Mat. Matilda is as ioyfull of thy god,
As ioy can make her: how fares Robin Hood?
Rob. Well my matilda, and if thou agree,
Nothing but mirth shall waite on thee and mee.
mat. O God, how full of perfect mirth were I,
To see thy grieve turnd to true iollitiz!
Rob. Give me thy hand; now gods curse on me light,
If I forsake not grieve, in grieves despighte.
Much, make a cry, and peomen stand yee round:
I charge yee never more let woefull sound
Be heard among yee; but what euer fall,
Laugh grieve to scorne; and so make sorowes small.
Much, make a cry, and loudly little lohn.

Much. O God, O God, helpe, helpe, helpe, I am vndoone, I am vndoone.
Ioh. Why how now Much? peace, peace, you roaring slau.

Much. My master bid mee cry, and I will cry till hee bid me leauie; Helpe, helpe, helpe: I mary will I..

Rob. Peace much; reade on the Articles good lohn.

Ioh. First, no man must presume to call our master,
By name of Earle, Lord, Baron, Knight, or Squire:
But simply by the name of Robin Hoodc.

Rob. Day peomen, to this order will ye yelde?

All. We yelde to serue our master Robin Hoodc.

F

John

The down-fall of Robert

John. Next tis agreed (if therto shee agree)
That faire Matilda henceforth change her name,
And while it is the chance of Robin Hood,
To live in Shreweswade a poore outlawes life,
She, by maid Marian's name, be only cald.

Mat. I am contented; reave on little John,
Henceforth let me be nam'd maid Marian.

John. Thirdly no yeoman, following Robin Hood
In Shreweswade, shall vse widow, wife, or maid,
But by true labour, lustfull thoughts expell.

Rob. How like yee this?

All. Master, we like it well.

Muc. But I cry no to it. What shal I do wth hym then?
Scar. Peace much; goe forwarde with the orders, fellowe John.

John. Fourthly, no passenger with whom ye meete,
Shall yee let passe till hee with Robin feast;
Except a Poast, a Carrier, or such folke,
As vse with foode to serue the market townes.

All. An order which we gladly will obserue.

John. Fiftly, yon never shall the poore man wrong,
Nor spare a priest, a blurer, or a clarke.

Much. Nor a faire wench, meete we her in the darke.

John. Lastly, you shall defend with all your power,
Maids, widowes, or phantoms, and distressed men.

All. All the se wee vowe to keepe, as we are men.

Rob. Then wend ye to the Greenewod merrily,

And let the light Roes bootelesse from yee runne.

Marian and I, as Soueraigns of your toyles,

Will wait, within our bower, your bent bowes spottel.

Much. Ile among them master.

Excunt winding their hornes.

Rob. Marian, thou seest though courtly pleasure want,
Yet country spoyle, in Shreweswade is not scant:
For the soule-rauishing delicious sound

Earle of Huntington.

Of instrumentall musique, we haue found
The winged quirtiers, with diuers notes,
Sent from their quaint recording prettie throats,
On every braunch that compasseth our bower:
Without commaund, contenting vs each hower.
For Arras hangings, and rich Tapestrie,
We haue sweete natures best imbrothery.
For thy steele glasse, wher ein thou wouldest looke,
Thy Christall eyes, gaze in a Christall brooke.
At Court, a flower oz two did decke thy head:
Now with whole garlands is it circled.
For what in wealth we want, we haue in flowers,
And what wee loose in halles, we finde in bowers.
mar. Marian hath all, sweete Robert, having thee;
And guesles thee as rich, in hauing mee.

Rob. I am indeeder
For having thee, what comfort can I neede?
mar. Goe in, goe in.

To part such true loue Robin, it were sinne. Exeunt.

Enter Prior, sir Doncaster, Frier Tucke.

Pri. To take his bodie, by the blessed Roode,
Twold doe me more, than any other, good.
Don. O tis an unchrist, still the Churchmens soe,
An ill end will betide him, that I knowe.
Twas hee that urg'd the king to seale the clergie,
Whento the holy land he tooke his iorney:
And he it is that rescued those two cheeves,
Scarlet and Scathlocke; ihat so mapie grieues
To Churchmen did: and now they say,
Hee keepeys in Shewerwod, and himselfe poch play
The lawlesse Rener: heare you, my Lord Prior,
He must be taken, or it will be wrong.

Pri. I, and he shall bee to.
Tuc. I, I loone say: But ere he be, many wil lie deade:
Except it be by sleight.

The down-fall of Robert

Don. I there, there, Frier.

Tuck. Give mee my Lord your execution,
The widowe Scarlets daughter, louely linnen,
Loues, and is belou'd of much the millers sonne,
If I can get the girle to goe with mee,
Disguis'd in habit, like a Pedlers moxt,
Ile serue this Execution, on my life,
And singe out a tyme alone to take
Robin, that often carelesse walkes alone.
Whyp' answe're not, remember what I saide,
Wond're I see comes linnen, that faire maide:
If wee agree, then back me soone with aise.

Enter linnen with a fardle.

Prior, Tuck if thou doe it,

Don. Pray you doe not talke.

As we were strangers, let vs carelesse walke.

Lin. Now to the greene wodde wend I, god me speede.

Tuck. Amen faire maid, and send thee, in thy neede,
Much, that is boyn to vse thee much good deeds.

Lin. Are you there Frier: nay then yfaith we hane it.

Tuck. What wenches my loue?

Lin. I, gee't mee when I craue it.

Tuck. Unaskt I offer, pre thee sweete girle take it.

Lin. Gifts stinke with proffer, soh Frier, I forsake it.

Tuck. I will be kinde.

Lin. Will not your kindnesse kill here

Tuck. With loue?

Lin. You cogge.

Tuck. Tut girle I am no miller: heare in your eare.

Don. The Frier courts her.

Pri. Tush, let him alone,

He is our Ladies Chaplaine, but serues lone.

Don. Then, from the Friers fault perchance, it may be
The prouerbe grew, Jone's taken for my Ladie.

Pri. Peace good sir Doncaster, list to the end.

linny

Earle of Huntington.

Iin. But meane yee faith and troth, shall I go weye?
Tuck. Upon my faith, I doe intend good faith.
Iin. And shall I haue the pinnes and laces too,
If I beare a Pedlers packe with you?
Tuck. As I am holy Frier, linny thou shalt.
Iin. Well, there's my hand, see Frier you do not hale.
Tuck. Goe but before into the myry mead:
And keepe the path that doth to Farnsfield lead:
Ile into Suchwell, and buy all the knacks,
That shall fit both of vs for Pedlers packes.
Iin. Who be they two that yonder walke, I prey?
Tuck. linny, I knowe not, be they what they may,
I care not for them, pre thee doe dot stay:
But make some spedde, that we were gone away.
Iin. Wel Frier, I trust you that we go to Sherewood.
Tuck. I by my beads, and unto Robin Hoode.
Iin. Make spedde good Frier. Exit linny.
Tuck. linny, doe not feare.
Lord Prior, now you heare
As much as I; get mee two Pedlers packes,
Points, laces, looking glasses, pinnes and knackes:
And let sir Doncaster with some wight lads,
Followe vs close: and ere these sortie howers,
Upon my life, earle Robert shall be ours.
Pri. Thou shalt haue any thing, my dearest Frier,
And in amends, Ile make thee my subprior.
Come good sir Doncaster, and if wee thine,
Weele frolicke with the Nunnes of Leeds bellue.

Exeunt.

Enter Fitzwater, like an olde man.
Fitz. Well did he wite, and mickle did he knowe,
Thae said this worldys felicitie was woe,
Whiche greatest states can hardly undergoe.
Whilom Fitzwater in faire Englands Court,
Posset felicitie and happy state:

The down-fall of Robert

And in his hall blithe fortune kept her spost:
Whiche glee, one howre of woe did ruinate.
Fitzwater once had castles, townes, and towers,
Faire gardens, orchards, and delightfull bowers:
But now no; garden, orchard, towne, no; tower
Hath poore Fitzwater left within his power.
Only wide walkes are left mee in the world,
Whiche these stiffe limmes wil hardly let me tread:
And when I sleepe, heauens glorious canopy
Mee and my moseie couch doth ouer-spreade.
Of this, iniurious John can not bereave mee,
The aire and earth he (while I liue) must leaue mee.
But from the English aire and earth, poore man,
His tyranay hath ruthlesse thee exil'd:
Yet ere I leaue it, Ile do what I can,
To see Matilda, my faire lucklesse childe:

Curtaines open, Robin Hode sleepes on a greene
banke, and Marian strewing flowers on him.
And in good time, see where my comfort stands,
And by her lyes dejected huntington.
Looke how my flower holds flowers in her hands,
And flings those sweetes, byon my sleeping sonne.
Ile close mine eyes as if I wanted sight,
That I may see the end of their delight.

Goes knocking with his staffe.

Mar. What aged man art thou? or by what chance,
Cam'st thou thus farre into the wailesse wodde?
Fitz. Widowe or wiffe, or maiden if thou be,
Lend mee thy hand: thou seest I cannot see.
Blessing be ride thee, little feell' st thou want:
With mee, good childe, foode is hoch hard and scant.
These smooth even vaines, assure mee he is kinde,
What ere he be, my girl, that thee doth sinde.
I poore and olde am rest of all earths good,
And desperatly am crept into this wodde,

To

Earle of Huntington.

To seeke the poore mans patron, Robin Hood.

Mar. And thou art welcome, welcome aged man,

I ten times welcome, to maid Marian,

Sit downe olde father, sit and call me daughter.

O God, how like he lookes to olde Fitzwater! Runs in.

Fitz. Is my Matilda cald maid Marian?

I wender why her name is changed thus.

Brings wine, me ate.

Mar. Here's wine to cheere thy hart: drinke aged man,

There's bensou and a knife, here's manchet fine:

Drinke good old man, I prye you drinke more wine.

My Robin stirres, I must sing him a steepe.

Rob. Nay, you haue wak't me Marian wth your talke.

What man is that, is come within our walke?

Mar. An aged man, a silly sightlesse man,

Neere pin'd with hunger: see how fast he eates.

Rob. Much good mayt doe him. Neuer is good meat

Illspent on such a stomacke. Father proface:

To Robin Hood thou art a welcome man.

Fitz. I thanke you master. Are you Robin hood?

Rob. Father, I am.

Fitz. God giue your soule much good,

For this good meat maid Marian hath giuen me.

But heare you master, can you tell mee newes,

Where faire matilda is, Fitzwaters daughter.

Rob. Whyp? here she is, this Marian is shee.

Fitz. Why did she chaunge her name?

Rob. What's that to thee?

Fitz. Yes, I could weepe for grieve that it is so:

But that my teares are all dryed vp with woe.

Rob. Whyp? shee is cald maid Marian, honest friend,

Because she liues a spotlesse maiden life:

And shall, till Robins outlawe life haue ende,

That he may lawfully take her to wife;

Whiche, if king Richard come, will not be long:

THE DOWN-TAN OF ROBERT

Fox, in his hand is power to right our wrong.
Fitz. If it be thus, I joy in her names change,
So pure loue in these times is very strange.
Mar. Robin, I thinke it is my aged father.
Rob. Tell mee old man, tell me in curtesie,
Are you no other than you seeme to be?
Fitz, I am a wretched aged man, you see:
If you will doe mee ought for chartie,
Further than this, sweete, doe not question mee.
Rob. You shall haue your desire, but what be these?

¶ Enter Frier Tucke, and Linny, like Pedlers, finging.

What lacke ye? what lacke yee? what ist ye will buy?
Any points, pins, or laces, any laces, pointes or pins?
Fine gloues, fine glasses, any busches, or maskes?
Or any other prettie things?
Come cheape for loue, or buy for money.
Any couy couy skins, (buy.
For laces, points, or pins? faire maidys come chuse or
I haue prettie porting ticks,
And many other tricks, come chuse for loue, or buy for money.

Rob. Pedler, I pre thee set thy packe downe here:
Marian shall buy, if thou be not too deare.

Tuck. linny, unto thy mistresse shewe thy packe,
Master for you I haue a pretty knacke:
From farre I brought it, please you see the same.

¶ Enter Frier like a Pedler, and Linny, sir Doncaster, and others weaponed.

Fri. Sir Doncaster, are not we Pedlerlike?
Don. Yes, passing fit, and yonder is the bower:
I doubt not wee shall haue him in our power.

Fri.

Earle of Huntington.

Fri. You and your compaine were best stand close,
Don. What shal the watchword be to bring vs forth?

Fri. Take it I pray, though it be much more worth.
When I speake that aloude, be sure I serue

The execution presently on him.

Don. Frier, looke toot.

Fri. Now lyny to your song.

Sings.

¶ Enter Marian, Robin.

mar. Pedler, what pretie toyes hane you to sell?

Fri. Lyny, unto our mistresse shewe your ware.

mar. Come in good woman.

Exit.

Fri. Master, looke here, and God give care,
So mote I thee, to her and mee, if euer wee, Robin to thee, that art so free, meane treachery.

Rob. On Pedler to thy packe,

If thou loue mee, my loue thou shalt not lacke.

Fri. Master, in brieske, there is a cheese, that seekes your griece, God send reliefe, to you in neede: for a soule deede, if not with spedde, you take good heede, there is decreede.

In yonder brake, ther lies a snake, that meanes to take, out of this woodde, the yeoman good, calde Robin hood.

Rob. Pedler, I prethee be more plaine: what braker what snake? what trappe? what traune?

Fri. Robin, I am a holy Frier, sent by the Prior, who did mee hitte, for to conspire thy endlesse woe, and ouer-thowde: but thou shalte knowe, I am the man, whome little John, from Notingham, desir'd to be, a clarke to thee; for heer to mee, saide thou wert free, and I did see, thy honestie; from gallowe tree, when thou didst free
Scathlocke and Scarlet certayne.

Rob. Why then it seemes that thou art Frier Tucke.

Fri. Master, I am.

Rob.

The down-fall of Robert

Rob. I pray thee frier say,
What treachery is meant to mee this day?
Fri. First winde your horne; then drawe your sworde:
hee windes his horne.

For I haue giuen a friers worde,
To take your boble prisoner:
And yield you to sir Doncaster,
The emulous Priest of Hotchessfield:
Whose power your bushie wodde doth hielde:
But I will die, ere you shall yield.

Enter little John, &c:
And sith your yeomen doe appeare,
Ile gine the watchword without feare:
Take it I pray thee, though it be more worth.

Rushe in Doncaster with his crue.
Don. Smite down, lay hold on outlawed Huntington.
John. Soft hot spurs priest, tis not so quickly done.
Don. Now out alas, the frier and the maide
Haue to falle theeues, sir Doncaster betraide.

Enter John crowned, Queene Elianor, Chester, Salsbury, Lord Prior, sit downe all. Warman stands.

John. As Gods Vicegerent, John ascends this thone,
His head impal'd with Englands Diademe,
And in his hand the awfull rodde of rule,
Giuing the humble, place of excellencie,
And tot he lowe earth, casting downe the prounde.

Qu. Such vpright rule, is in each Realme allowed.
John. Chester, you once were Elies open friend,
And yet are doubtfull whether he deserue
A publicke triall for his priuate wrongs.

Chest. I still am doubtfull, whether it be fit
To punish priuate faults with publicke shame,
In such a person as Lord Ely is.

Prior,

Earle of Huntington.

Prior. Yea Honorable Chester, more it lies
To make apparent, sinnes of mighty men,
And on their persons sharply to correct
A little fault, a very small defect;
Than on the poore, to practise chaitisement,
For if a poore man die, or suffer shame,
Only the poore and vile respect the same:
But if the mighty fall, feare then besets
The proud harts of the mighty ones, his mates:
They thinke the world is garnished with nets,
And trappes ordained to intrappe their states,
Which feare, in them, begets a feare of ill,
And makes them good, contrary to their will.

John. Your Lordship hath said right: Lord Salbury,
Is not your minde as ours, concerning Ely?

Sal. I judge him worthy of reprooche and shame.

John. Warman, bring forth your prisoner, Ely the
And wth him, bring the seale that he detains. (Chancellor, Warman, why goest thou not?

War. Be good to mee my Lord.

John. What hast thou done?

War. Speake soz mee my Lord Prior.
All my good Lords, intreate his Grace soz mee.
Ely, my Lord.

John. Why, where is Ely Warman?

War. Fled to day, this mistie morning he is fled away.

Io. O Iudas, whom no^r friend, no^r foe may trust,
Thinkest thou with teares and plaints to answere this?

Doe I not knowe thy heart? doe not I knowe,

That by^rbies haue purchass Ely this escape?

Never make anticke faces, never bende,

With fainted humblesse, thy still crouching knee;

But with st^rte eyes, unto thy doome attend.

Villane, I le plague thee soz abusing mee:

Goe hence, and henceforth never set thy foote

War. What ſaies the Queene?

Q. Why thus I ſay:

Ioh. Wllee will our selues steype in and visit him.
Mother, and my good Lord, will you attend vs?

Prior. I gladly will attend your Majestie.

Ihon. Now good Lord helpe vs
When I saide good Lord,
I meant not you Lord Prior: Lord I know you are
But good God knowes, you never meane to bee.

Exeunt Ibon, Queenie, Chester, Salsbury.

Prior. Iohn is incest, and very much I doubt
That vllane Warman hath accused mee,
About the scape of Ely: well, suppose he haue:
Whats that to mee? I am a Cleargie man,
And all his power, if hee all extend,
Cannot prouaile against my holy order:
But the Archbisshoppes Grace is now his friend,
And may perchance attempt to doe me ill.

Enter a seruing man.

What newes with you sir?
Ser. Euen beaute newes my Lord: for the light fire
Falling, in manner of a fier Drake,
Upon a barne of yours, hath burnt six barnes,
And not a strike of corne reserv'd from dust.
No hand could saue it, yet ten thousand hands,
Labourd their best, though none for loue of you:
For every tongue with bitter cursing hand,
Pour Lordshipp as the viper of the land.

Prior. What meant the villaness?

Sot. Thus and thus they cride;
Upon this churle, this hoorder vp of corne,
This spoyler of the Earle of Huntington,
This lust-defiled, mercilesse false Prior,
Heauen ratgneth vengeance downe in shape of fier.
Old wifes that scarce could with their croches creep,
And little babes, that newly learende to speake,
Men masterlesse that thorough want did weepe,

The down-fall of Robert

All in one voice, with a confused cry,
In execrations band you bitterly,
Plague followe plague, they cry, he hath undone
The good Lord Robert, Earle of Huntington:

And then

*H*o wi: What then, thou villane? Get thee from my sight.
They that wish plagues, plagues wil upon them light.

Enter another servant.

Pri. What are your tidingse?

Ser. The Couent of Saint Maries are agreed,
And haue elected, in your Lordshippes place,
Olde father Jerome, who is staled Lord Prior,
By the newe Archbisshoppe.

Pri. Of Yorke thou meantst.

A vengeance on him, he is my hopes foe.

Enter a Herald.

*H*e: Gilbert de Hood late Prior of Saint Maries,
Our Soueraigne Iohn commandeth thee by mee,
That presently thou leave this blessed land,
Defiled with the burden of thy sinne.
All thy goods temporall and spirituall,
(With free consent of Hubert Lo: de Yorke, Primate of England and thy Ordinary)
He hath suspended, and vow'd by heaven,
To hang thee vp, if thou depart not hence,
Without delaying or more question:
And that he hath goed reason for the same,
He sends this writing arm'd with Warmans hand,
And comes himselfe: whose presence if thou stay,
I feare this Hunne will see thy dying day.

Pri. D, Warman hath betrauld mee: woe is mee.

Enter Iohn, Queene, Chester, Salsbury.

Ioh. Hence with that Prior, sirra do not speake,
My eyes are full of wrath, my heart of wreake:
Let Lester come his hauy hart, I am sure,

Will

Earle of Huntington.

Will cheche the kingly course we vndertake,

Exeunt cum Prior,

Enter Lester, drumme and Ancient.

Ioh. Welcome from warre thrice noble earle of Lester;
Unto our Court, welcome most valiant earle.

Lest. Your Court in England, & king Richard gone,
A king in England, and the king from home:
This sight and salutations are so strange,
That what I shold, I know not how to speake.

Ioh. What would you say speake boldly, we intreat.
Lest. It is not feare, but wonder barres my speach;
I muse to see a mother and a Queene,
Two Peeres, so great as Salsbury and Chester,
Sitt and suppozt poud vsurpatton,
And see king Richards crowne, wonne by earle Iohn.

Qu. He sits as viceroy and a substitute.
Chest. He must and shal resigne when Richard comes.
Sals. Chester, he will without your must and shall.

Lest. Whether he will or no, he shall resigne.
Ioh. You knowe your own will Lester, but not mine,

Lest. Tell me among ye, where is reuerent Ely,
Left by our dreade king, as his deputie?

John. Banisht he is, as poud usurpers shold.

Lest. pride then, belike, was enemy to pride:
Ambition in your selfe, his fate enuied.

Where is Fitzwater, that old honoured Lord?

Ioh. Dishonourd and exil'd, as Ely is.

Lest. Exil'd he may be, but dishonourd never:
He was a fearelesse sholdier, and a vertuous scholler,
But where is Huntington, that noble youth?

Chest. Undoone by ryot.

Lest. Ah, the greater ruth.

Ioh. Lester, you question more than doth become you:
On to the purpose, why you come to vs.

Lest. I came to Ely, and to all the State,

The down-fall of Robert

Sent by the king, who three times sent before,
To hane his ransome brought to Austria:
And if you be elected deputie,
Doe as you ought, and send the ransome money.

Ioh. Lester, you see I am no deputie:
And Richards ransome if you doe require,
Thus wee make answere: Richard is a king,
In Cyprus, Acon, Acres, and rich Palestine:
To get those kingdome England lent him men,
And many a million of her substance spent,
The very entr als of her wombe was rent.
No plough but paid a share, no nee by hand,
But from his pooze estate of penurie,
Unto his voyage offered more than mites,
And more, pooze soules, than they had might to spare.
Yet were they toyfull. For still flying uelwes,
And byng I perceiue them now to be,
Came of king Richards gloriuous victories,
His conquest of the Souldans, and such tales,
As blewe them vp with hope, when he recydnd,
He would haue scattered gold about the streetes.

Lest. Doe Princes fight for gold? O leaden thought!
Your father knelwe, that honour was the aime
Kings leuell at: by sweete Saint John I swaare,
You vrge mee so that I cannot forbeare.
What doe you tell of money lent the King,
When first he went into this holy warre?
As if he had exaulted from the poore,
When you, the Queene, and all that heare me speake,
Know with what zeale the people gaue their goods:
Olde wifes tooke siluer buckles from their belts,
Young maidis the gilt pins that tuckt vp their traines,
Children their prettie whistles from their neckes,
And every man what he did most esteeme,
Crying to souldours; Weare these gifts of ours.

This

Earle of Huntington.

This prooues that Richard had no neede to wrong,
Or force the people, that with willing hearts
Gane more than was desir'd. And where you say,
You guesse Richards victories but lies:
I swere he wan rich Cyprus with his sworde:
And thence, more gloriouſ than the guide of Greece,
That brought so huge a fleete to Tenedos,
He ſailed along the Mediterra[n]an ſea:
Where on a Sunbright morning he did meeke
The warlike ſouldiours, well prepared fleete.
O still mee thinkes I ſee king Richard ſtand,
In his guilt armour ſtained with Pagans blood,
Upon a gallies prowe, like warres fierce God,
And on his crest, a Crucifix of golde.
O that daies honour can be neuer tolde:
Six times ſix ſeuerall Brigandines he boardest,
And in the greedie waues flung wounded Turkes,
And three times thrice the winged Gallies bankeſ,
(Wherin the ſouldans ſonne was Admirall)
In his owne perlon royll Richard ſmooth'd,
And leſt no heathen hand to be upheau'd
Againſt the Christian ſouldiers.

John. Lester, ſo:

Did he all this?

Lest, I by God hee did,
And more than this; nay leaſt at it John:
I ſwear hee did, by Lesters faith hee did,
And made the greene ſea red with Pagan blood,
Leading to Ioppa, gloriouſ victory,
And following feare that fled unto the ſoe.
John. All this hee did, per chance all this was ſo.
Lest. Holy God helpe mee, ſouldiers come away:
This carpet knight fits carpig at our ſcarres,
And ieasts at thole moſt gloriouſ wellfought warres.
John. Lester, you are too hot: ſlay, goe not yet:

The down-fall of Robert

Ye thinkes, if Richard wonne these victories,
The wealthie kingdomes, he hath conquerred,
May better than poore England pay his ransome:
He left this Realme as a young orphant maid,
To Ely, the stepfather of this state,
That shipt the virgin to her very shrone:
And Lester, had not John more carefull bin
Than Richard, at this hower, Englād had not Englād
Therefore good warlike Lord, take this in hysse:
We wish king Richard well,
But can send no relief.

Lest, O, let not my heart breake w/inward griesse.

Ioh, Yes let it Lester, it is not amisse,

That twenty such hearts breake, as your heart is.

Lest, Are you a mother? were you Englands Duccene?

Were Henry, Richard, Geffrey (your sonnes)

All sonnes, but Richard, sunne of all those sonnes?

And can you let this little metter,

This ignis Fatuus, this same wandring fire,

This Gablin of the night, this brand, this sparke,

Seeme through a lanthorne, greater than he is?

By heaven you doe not well, by earth you doe not.

Chester, nor you, nor you eattle Salsbury,

Ye doe not, no yee doe not what yee shoule.

Q. Were this Beare loole, how he wold tear our mawes?

Che. Pale death & vengeance dwel within his iawes.

Salt. But we can muzzle him, and binde his pawes,

If king John say we shall, wee will indeede.

Ioh. Doe if you can.

Lest, Its well thou hast some feare!

No curres, ye haue no teethe to baitte this Beare.

I will not bid mine ensigne bearer waue

My tottered colours in this worthlesse aire,

Whic h your vyle breathes viley contaminate.

Beare, thou hast bene my Auncient bearer long,

Ant.

Earle of Huntington.

And borne vp Lester: Beare in sooren lands:
Yet now resigne these colours to my hands,
For I am full of grieve, and full of rage.
John, looke vpon mee, thus did Richard take
The coward Austria's colours in his hand,
And thus he cast them vnder Acon walles,
And thus he trod them vnderneath his feete.
Rich colours, how I wrong ye by this wrong!
But I will right yee: Beare, take them againe,
And keepe them euer, euer them maintayne.
We shall haue vse for them I hope, ere long.

Ioh. Darest thou attempt thus proudly in our sight?
Lest. What ist a subiect dares, that I dare not?
Sals. Dare subiects dare, their Soueraigne being by?
Lest. O God, that my true Soueraigne were ny.

Qu. Lester, he is.

Lest. Madam, by God pou ly.

Cheit. Unmannerd man.

Lest. A plague of reuerence,
Where no regard is had of excellencye. Sound drum.
But you will quitt mee nowe; I heare your drummes,
Your principallie hath stird vp men,
And now ye thinke to muzzle vp this Beare:
Still they come nearer, but are not the neare.

Ioh. What drums are these?

Sals. I thinke some friends of yours

Prepare a power to resist this wrong.

Lest. Let them prepare; for Lester is preparde,
And thus he wooes his willing men to fight;
Souldiers, yee see king Richards open wrong,
Richard that led yee to the gloriouse Cast,
And made yee treade vpon the blessed land,
Where he, that brought all Christians blessednesse,
Was borne, liued, wrought his miracles, and died,
From death arose, and thento heaven ascended;

The down-fall of Robert

Whose true religious faith ye haue defended.
Yee fought, and Richard taught yee how to fight, Against prophane men, following Mahomer:
But if ye note, they did their kings their right,
These moxe than heathen, sacrilegious men,
Professing Christ, banish Christ's champion hence,
Their lawfull Lord, their homeborne Soueraigne,
With pettie quarrels, and with slight pretence.

Enter Richmond, souldiers.

O let me be as short as time is short,
For the arm'd foe is now withyn our sight.
Remember how against ten, one man did fighc,
So hundreds against thousands, haue borne headt.
You are the men that ever conquered.
If multitudes oppresse ye that ye die,
Lets sell our liues, and leaue them valiantly:
Courage vpon them, till wee cannot stand.

Ioh. Richmond is yonder.

Qu. I, and sonne, I thinke,
The king is not farre off.

Chest. Now heauen forsend.
Lest. Why smite ye not, but stand thus cowardly?
Rich. If Richmond hurt good Lester, let him die.
Lest. Richmond, O pardon mine offending eye,
That tooke thee fo^r a foe; welcome deare friend;
Where is my Soueraigne Richard? Thou and he
Were both in Austria: Richmond, comfort mee,
And tell mee where he is, and how he fares.
O, for his ransome, many thousand cares
Haue mee afflicted.

Rich. Lester, he is come to London,
And will himselfe to faulchesse Austria,
Like a true king, his promis'd ransome beare.
Lest. At London saist thou Richmond, is he there?
Farewell, I will not stay to tell my wrongs,

T

Earle of Huntingdon.

To these pale coloured, hartlesse, guiltie Lordes.
Richmond, you shall goe with mee, doe not stay,
And I will tell you wonders by the way.

Rich. The king did doubt you had some injury,
And therefore sent this power to rescue yee.

Lest. I thanke his Grace. Madam adieu, adieu,
Ile to your sonne, and leue your shade with you.

Exeunt.

Ioh. Marke how he mocks mee, calling me your shade.
Chester and Salsbury, shall wee gather power,
And keepe what we haue got?

Chest. And in an hower,
Be taken, indg'd, and heaved with disgrace.

Salsbury, what say you?

Sals. My Lord, I bid your excellency adieu.
I, to king Richard, will submit my knee,
I haue good hope his Grace will pardon mee.

Chest. And Salsbury, Ile goe along with thee.
Farewell Queene mother, fare you well Lord Iohn.

Ioh. Mother, stay you,

Qu. Not I sonne, by Saint Anne,

Ioh. Will you not stay?

Qu. Goe with me: I will doe the best I may,
To beg my sonnes forgiuenesse of my sonne. Exit.

John. Goe by your selfe. By heaven twas long of you,
I rose to fall so soone. Lester and Richmonds true,
They come to take me. Now too late I rue
My prouis attempt: like falling Phaeton,
I perish from my gilding of the sunne.

Lest. I will goe backe yf alh once more and see,
Whether this mock-king and the mother Queene,
And who heres neither Queene nor Lord:
What, king of Crickets, is there none but you? (right:
Come off, off: this crowne, this scepter are king Richards.

The down-fall of Robert

Beare thou them Richmond, thou art his true knight.
You would not send his ransome, gentle John;
He's come to fetch it now. Come wily Fox,
Now you are stript out of the Lyons case,
What, dare you looke the Lyon in the face?
The English Lyon, that in Austria,
With his strong hand, puld out a Lyons heart.
Good Richmond tell it mee; for Gods sake doe;
Oh, it does mee good to heare his glories tolde.

Rich. Lester, I saw king Richard with his fist,
Strike deade the sonne of Austrian Leopold,
And then I sawe him, by the Dukes commaund,
Compaſt and taken by a troope of men,
Who led king Richard to a Lyons denne,
Opening the doore and in a panedcourt,
The cowards left king Richard weaponlesse.
Anone comes forthe the fierc-eyde dreadfull beast,
And with a heart-amazing voice he roarde,
Opening (like hell) his iron toothed iawes,
And stretching out his fierce death-threatening palues,
I call thee Lester, and I smile thereat,
(Though then, God knowes, I had no power to smile)
I stoode by treacherous Austria all i he while:
Who in a gallery, with iron grates,
Held to behoide king Richard made a prey.

Lest. What wast thou smildest at in Austria?

Rich. Lester, he shooke, so helpe me God, he shooke,
With very terrorre, at the Lyons looke.

Lest. Ah coward: but goe on what Richard did?
Rich. Richard about his right hand wound a scarle
(God quitt her for it) given him by a maide,
With endlesse good may that good deede be paid,
And thust that arme downe the devouring th;oat
Of the fierce Lyon, and withdrawing it,
Drew out the strong heart of the monstrous beast,

And

Earle of Huntington.

And left the senselesse bodie on the ground.

Lest O royall Richard! Richmond, looke on John:
Does he not quake in hearing this discourse?
Come, we will leue him Richmond, let vs goe,
John, make sute for grace, yis your meaus you knowe.

Exeunt.

Ioh. A mischiefe on that Lester: is he gone?
I were best goe too, least in some mad fit,
He turne againe, and leave me prisoner.
Southward I dare not faine faine I wold,
To Scotland bend my course: but all the woddes
Are full of Outlawes, that in Bendall greene,
Followe the outlawed earle of Huntington,
Well, I will cloach my selfe in such a sute,
And by that meanes aswell scape all pursuite,
As passe the daunger-threatning Huntington:
For having many outlawes theyl think mee,
By my attire, one of their mates to be.

Exit.

Enter Scarlet, John, and Frier Tucke.

Fri. Scarlet and John, so God me saue,
No minde unto my heades I haue:
I thinks it be a lucklesse day;
For I can neicher sing, nor say,
Nor haue I any power to looke,
On Portals, or on Martins booke.

Scar. What is the reason, tell vs Frier?

Fri. And would yee haue mee be no lyer,

Ioh. No: God defend that you shoulde lie,
A Churchman be alyer: sie.

Fri. Then by this hallowed Crucifire,
The holy water, and the pire,
It greatly at my stomacke stickes,
That all this day we had no guesse,
And haue of meate so many a messe.

Much.

The down-fall of Robert

Much bring out Ely, like a country man with a basket.

Much. Well: and ye be but a market, ye are but a market man.

Ely. I am sure sir, I doe you no hurt, doe I?

Scar. Wee shall haue company, no doubt:

My fellowe much hath founde one out.

Fri. A fox, a fox: as I am Frier,
Much is well worthie of god hire.

Ioh. Say Frier soothly knowest thou him?

Fri. It is a wolse in a sheepes skinne.

Goe callour master, little Iohn,

A glad man will he be anone:

It's Ely man, the Chancelor.

Ioh. Gods pittie looke unto him, Frier. Exit Iohn.

Much. What, ha ye egges to sell old fellowe?

Ely. I sir, some fewe, and those my neede constraines mee beare to Mansfield,
That I may sell them there, to buy me bread.

Scar. Alas good man: I prethe where dost dwell?

Ely. I dwell at Oxen sir.

Scar. I knowe the towne.

Much. Alas poore fellow, if thou dwel with Oxen,
It's strange they doe not goze thee with their hornes.

Ely. Masters, I tell yee truly where I dwell,
And whether I am going; let mee goe:
Your master would be much displeas'd I knowe,
If he shold heare, you hinder poore men thus.

Fri. Father, one word with you before we part.

Much. Scarle, the Frier will make vs haue anger all:
Farewell, and beare me witnessse, though I staid him,
I staid him not:

An olde fellowe, and a market man! Exe.

Fri. Whoop! In your riddles much: then we shall ha'e,

Scar. What dost thou Frier? pre thee let him goe.

Fri.

Earle of Huntington.

Fri. I pre the Scarlet let vs two alone.

Ely. Frier, I see thou knowest me, let me goe;
And many a good turne I to thee will owe.

Fri. My masters service bids me answere no:
Yet loue of holy churchmen wils it so.
Well, good my Lord, I will doe what I may
To let your holinesse escape away:

Enter Robin.

Here comes my master, if he question you,
Answere him like a plaine man, and you may passe.

Ely. Thankes Frier.

Fri. O, my Lord thinkes mee an Asse.

Rob. Frier, what honest man is there with thee?

Fri. A silly man, good master. I will speake for you:
Stand you aloofe, for feare they note your face.
Master in plaine, it were but in vaine, long to detaine,
With coyes & with bables, with fond fained fables: but him that you see, in so mean degree, is the Lord Ely, that helpt to exile you, that oft did reuile you. Though in his fall, his traine be but small, and no man at all, will giue him the wall, nor Lord doth him call: Yet he did ride, on Jennets pide, and knightes by his side, did foote it each tide: I see the fall of pride.

Rob. Frier, enough.

Fri. I pray sir let him goe,
He is a very simple man in hewe,
He dwelles at Oxen, and to vs doth say,
To Mansfield market he doth take his way.

Ioh. Frier, this is not Mansfields market day.

Rob. What would he sell?

Fri. Egges sir, as he saies,
Rob. Scarlet, goe thy waies, take in this olde man,
Fill his skinne with benson:
And after giue him money for his egges.

Ely. No sir I thanke you, I haue promised them

The down-fall of Robert

To master Baillies wife of Mansfield, all.

Rob. Nay sir you doe me wrong:

No Baillie, nor his wife shall haue an egge.

Scarlet, I say, take his egges, and gine him money.

Ely. Pray sir,

Fri. Wulh, let him haue your egges.

Ely. Faith I haue none.

Fri. Gods pittie, then he will finde you soone.

Scar. Here are no egges, nor any thing but hay.

Pes by the masse, here's somewhat like a scale. (seale)

Rob. O God, my Princes seale, faire Englands royall

Tell mee, thou man of death, thou wicked man,

How camst thou by this scale: wilt thou not speake?

Bring burning irons, I will make him speake.

For I doe knowe the poore distressed Lord,

The kings Vicegerent, learned reverend Ely,

Flying the furse of ambitious Iohn,

Is murdred by this peasant. Speake vile man,

Wher thou hast done thrice Honorable Ely?

Ely. Why dost thou grace Ely with stiles of Grace,

Who thew with all his power sought to disgrace?

Rob. Belike his widsome lawe some fault in mee.

Ely. No I assure thee Honorable earle:

It was his ennie, no defect of thine,

And the persuasions of the Prior of Yorke,

Which Ely now repents; see Huntington,

Ely himselfe, and pitie him, good sonne.

Rob. Alas for woe, alack that so greate state

The malice of this wold should ruinate.

Come in great Lord, sit downe and take thy ease,

Receiue the seale and pardon my offence,

With me you shall be safe and if you please,

Till Richard come, from all mens violence:

Aged Fitzwater, banished by Ioh.

And his faire daughter shall conuerse with you.

Earle of Huntington.

I and my men that me attend vpon,
Shall giue you all that is to Honour due.
Will you accept my seruice, noble Lord?
Ely. Thy kindnesse dries me to such inward shame,
That for my life, I no reply can frame.
Goe, I will followe, blessed maist thou bee,
That thus releev'ſt thy foes in miserie. Exeunt.

Ioh. Skelton, a wodde or two beside the play,
Fri. Now sir John Elcam, what ist you would say;
Ihon. He thinks I see no feasts of Robin Hoode,
No merry Morices of Frier Tuck,
No pleasant skippings vp and downe the wodde,
No huncing songs, no coursing of the Bucke:
Pray God this Play of ours may haue good lucke,
And the kings Maestie mislike it not.

Fri. And if he doe, what can we doe to that?
I promise him a Play of Robin Hoode,
His honoorable life, in merry Sherewode;
His Maestie himselfe suruaide the plat,
And had me boldly write it, it was good.
For merry feasts, they haue bene showne before,
As how the Frier fell into the Well,
For loue of Linn that faire bonny bell:
How Greeneleafe robb the Shriene of Notingham,
And other mirthfull matter, full of game.
Our play exprestes noble Roberts wrong,
His milde forgering trecherous inturie:
The Abbots malice, rakē in cinders long,
Breakes out at last with Robins Tragedie.
If these that beare the historie reheatit,
Condemne my Play when it begins to spring,
Ile let it wicher while it is a budde,
And never shewe the flower to the King.

John. One thing beside; you fall into your vaine,
Of ribble rabbble rimes, Skeltonicall,

The down-fall of Robert

So oft, and stand so long, that you offend.

Fri. It is a fault I hardly can amend

O how I chame my tongue to talke these tearmes,

I doe forget oft times my Friers part;

But pull mee by the sleeve when I excede,

And you shall see mee mend that fault indeede.

Therefore still sit you, doth Skeleton intreat you,

While he faceth wil breechly repeate you, the history al;

And tale tragical, by whose treachery, and base iniury,

Robin the good, calde Robin Hood, died in Sherewodde:

Whitch till you see, be rul'd by me, sit patiently, & giue

a plaudite, if any thing please yee.

Exeunt.

Enter Warman.

War. Banisht from all, of all am I bereft,

No moze than what I weare, unto me left,

Dwretched, dwretched griefe, desertfull fall:

Scriuynge to get all, I am rest of all:

Pet if I could a while my selfe reliefe,

Till Ely be in some place settled,

A double restitution shold I get,

And these sharpe sorowes that haue ioy supprest,

Shold turne to ioy with double interest.

Enter a gentleman, Warmans cosin.

And in good time, here comes my cosin Warman,

Whome I haue often pleasur'd in my time:

His house at Bingham I bestow'd on him:

And therfore doubt not, he will giue me house-roome,

Good even good cosin.

Cos. O coulson Warman, what good newes with you?

War. Whether so farre a foote walk you in Sherewod?

Cos. I came from Rotheram, and by hither Farnfield

My horse did tire, and I walke home a foote.

War. I doe beseech you coulson at some friends,

Or at your owne house soz a weeke or two,

Giue me some succour.

Cos.

Earle of Huntington.

Col. Ha: succour say you?
No sir, I heard at Mansfield how the matter stands,
How you have justly lost your goodz and lands,
And that the Princes indignation
Will fall on any that reliues your state.
Away from mee, ysur trecheries I hate.
You when your noble master was vndoone
(That honourable minded Huntington)
Who forwader than you, all to distraine:
And as a wolfe that thalseth on the plaine,
The harmelesse hind: so wolfe-like you pursued
Him and his seruants: vile ingratitude,
Damnd Iudaisme, false wrong, abhorred trechery,
Impious wickednesse, wicked impietie.
Out, out vpon thee, soh, I spit at thee.

War. Good cosen.

Col. Away, Ile spurne thee if thou followe me. Exit.
War. O tust heauen, how thou plagu'lt iniquicie!
All that he has, my hand on him bestowed:
My master gaue mee all I ever owed:
My master I abus'd in his distresse:

In mine, my kinfman leaues me comfortlesse.

Enter Tayler of Notingham, leading a dog.
Here comes another, one that yesterday
Was at my seruice, came when I did call,
And him I made Tayler of Notingham,
Perchance some pittie dwelles within the man:

Taylor, well met, dost thou not know me man?

Lay. Yes, thou art Warman, every knave knowes thee.

War. Thou knowest I was thy master yesterday.

Lay. I, but tis not as it was, farewell, goe by.

War. Good George reliue my bitter misery.

Lay. By this fleshe and bloode I will not,

No if I do, the diuell take me quicke.

I haue no money; begger balk the way.

War. I doe not aske thee money.

Tay.

A.3

The down-fall of Robert

Iay. Wouldest ha meate?

War. Would God I had a little breade to eate.

Iay. Soft, let me feele my bagge. O heare is meate,
That I put vp at Redford for my dogge,
I care not greatly if I giue him this.

War. I pre thee doe?

Yet let me search my conscience for it first:
My dogge's my servant, faithfull, trustie, true:
But Warman was a traitor to his Lord,
A reprobate, a rascall, and a Jewe,
Worse than dogges, of men to be abhoard.
Scarue thererfore Warman, dogge receiuē thy due;
Followe me not, least I belabour you,
You halfe-sac't groat, you thick-cheekt chittiface,
You Iudas, villane, you that haue vndoone
The honourable, Robert, earle of Huntington. Exit.

War. Worse than a dogge, the villane me respects,
His dogge bee seedea, mee in my neede rejects.
What shall I doe? yonder I see a shed,
A little cottage, where a woman dwelles,
Whose husband I from death deliuered:
If he denie mee, then I faint and die.
Ho goodwife Tomson!

Wo. What a noyse is there?
A foule shame on yee: is it you that knocke?

War. What, doe you knowe mee then?

Wo. Whoop, who knowes not you?
The beggerd banisht shrieue of Nottingham,
You that betraide your master, iſt not you?
Yes, a shame on you: and forsooth ye come,
To haue some succour here, because you sau'd,
My unthiſt husband from the gallowe tree.
A porþpon yee both: iwould both for me,
Were hang'd together; but soft, let mee see:
The man lookes saint: feellſt thou indeede distresse'?

War.

Earle of Huntington.

War. O doe not mocke me in my heaulnesse.

Wo. Indeede I doe not: well I haue within,
A caudle made, I will goe fetch it him.

War. O blessed woman, comfortable word:

|Be quiet intrals, you shall de releen'd:

Wo. Here Warman, put this heypen caudle oþ thy head:

See downward, powder is thy masters walke,

And like a Iudas, on some rotten tree,

Hang by this rotten trunke of miserte:

That goers by, thy wretched end may see.

Stirr'st thou not villane? get thee from my doope:

A plague vpon thee, haste and hang thy selfe,

Ronne rogue away: tis thou that hast vndone

Thy noble master, earle of Huntington.

War. Good counsell, and good comfort by my faith:

Three Doctors are of one opinion,

That Warman must make spedee to hang himselfe:

The last hath giuen a candle comfortable,

That to recure my grieses is strong and able:

Ile take her medcine, and Ile chuse this way;

Wherien she saith my master hath his walke;

There will I offer life for trechery,

And hang, a wonder to all goers by.

But lo! what sound hermonious is this?

What birds are these, that sing so chearefully,

As if they did salute the flowzing spryng?

Fitter it were, with tunes more dolefully

They shrieke out sorrowe; than thus cheerely sing.

I will goe seekke sad desperations cell:

This is not it, for here are greene-leard trees.

Ah for one winter-bitten bared bough,

Wherien, a wretched life, a wretch would leese:

O here is one: thicke blessed be this tree,

If a man curset, may a blessing giue

Enter old Fit-water.

The down-fall of Robert

But out alas, yonder comes one to me,
To hinder death, when I detest to live.

Fitz. What woefull voice heare I within this wad? A
What wretch is there complaines of wretchednesse?

War. A man, old man, bereau'd of all earth's good,
And desperately seekes death in this distresse.

Fitz. Seeke not so that which will be here too soone,
At least if thou be guiltie of ill deedes.
Where art thou sonne? come and neerer sit,
Heare wholsome counsell, gaint vnhallowed thoughts.

War. The man is blinde. Muffle the eye of day,
Ye gloomy clouds (and darker than my deedes,
That darker be than pitchie sable night)
Muster together on these high topt trees,
That not a sparke of light thorough their sprayeres,
May hinder what I meane to execute.

Fitz. What dost thou mutter? heare mee wofull man.

¶ Enter Marian, with meat.

Mari. God morowe fathur.

Fitz. Welcome louely maide,
And in good time, I trust you hither come:
Looke if you see not a distressefull man,
That to himselfe intendeth violence:
One such ev'n now was here and is not farre:
Seeke I beseech you, saue him if you may.

Mari. Alas here is, here is a man enrag'd,
Fastning a halter on a withered bough,
And stares vpon mee, with such frighted lookes,
As I am fearefull of his sharpe aspect. (dsc.)

Fitz. What meanst thou wretch? say, what ist thou wile
War. As Iudas did, so I intend to doe.

For I haue done alreadie as he did:
His master he betrayd: so I haue mine.

Faire mistresse looke not on me with your blessed eyne.

From

From them as from some ercelleunce diuine,
Sparkles sharpe iudgement, and commaunds wth speede:
Faire, fare you well: foule fortune is my fate:
As all betrayers, I die desperate.

Fitz. Soft sir, goe Marian call in Robin Hoodes:
Tis Warman woman, that was once his steward.

Mar. Alas, although it be, yet lase his life:
I will sende helpe unto you p^resently. Exit.

Fitz. Nay Warman stay, thou shalt haue thy will.
War. Art thou a blinde man, and canst see my shame?
To hinder treachers, God restozeth sight,
And giueth infants tonges to cry alowde,
A wofull woe against the trecherous.

Enter Much running.

Much. Hold, hold, hold. I heare say, my fellowe War-man is about to hang himselfe, and I make some speede to saue him a labour. O good master Justice Shrieue, haue you execution in hand, and is there such a murren among theeuers and hangmen, that you play two parts in one? For old inquaintance, I wil play one part: The knot under the eare, the knitting to the tree: Good master Warman, leaue that worke for mee.

War. Dispatch me Much, & I will pray for thee.
Much. Nay keape your prayers, no bodie sees vs.

He takes the rope, and offeres to clime.

Fitz. Downe sirra, downe: whether a knaues name clime you?

Much. A plague on ye for a blinde sinklanker: would I were your match: you are much blinde yfaith, can hit so right.

Enter little John.

John. What master Warman, are yee come to yield
A true account for your false stewardshippe?

Enter Sarlet and Scathlocke.

Scath. Much, if thou meanest to get a hundred pound,
Present vs to the shrieue of Nottingham.

Much

The down-tan of Robe.

Much. Halle, I thinke there was such a purclameion,
Come my small fellowe John,
You shall haue halfe, and therefore bring in one.

John. No, my big fellow, honest master Much.
Take all unto your selfe, ile be no halfe.

Much. Then stand, you shall be the two theenes, and I will be the presenter.

O master Shrieue of Notingham,
When eares unto my tydings came

(Ile speake in prose, I misse this verse vilye) that Scarlock and Scarle were arrested by Robin Hood my master, and little John my fellowe, and I Much his seruant, and taken from you master Shrieue, being well forward in the hanging way, wherein yee now are/ and God keepe yee in the same/ also y you master Shrieue would giue any man in towne, citie, or contrey, a hundred pound of lawfull arrant money of Englannde, that would bring y same two theees, being these two: now
I, the said Much, chalenge of you the saide Shrieue, bynging them, the same money.

Scar. Faith, he can not pay thee, much.

Much. I, but while this end is in my hand, and that aboue his necke, he is bound to it.

Enter Robin, Ely, Marian.

War. Mock on, mock on: make me your feasting game,
I doe deserue much more than this small shame.

Rob. Disconsolate and poore detected man,
Cast from thy necke that shamefull signe of death,
And liue soz mee, if thou amende thy life,
As much infavour as thou ever didst.

War. O worse than any death,
When a man, wrongd, his wronger pitteth.

Ely. Warnan, be comforted, rise and amend.
On my word Robin Hoode will be thy friend.

Rob. I will indeede go in, heart-broken man,
Father Fitzwater, y^eap you leade him in.

Rinde

EARL OF RUMINGTON.

Vnde marian, with sweete comforts comfort him,
And my tall yeomen, as you mee affect,
Upbraide him not with his forpassed life.
Warman, goe in, goe in and comfort thee,
War. O God requisite your Honours curtesie,
Mar, Scathlocke or Scarlet, helpe vs some of yee.
Exeunt Warman, marian, Fitzwater, Scathlock, Scarlet,
Much, Enter Frier Tucke in his trusse, without his weede.

Fri. Jesu benedicte, pittie on pittie, mercie on mercy, misery on misery; O such a sight, as by this light, doth mee affright.

Rob. Tell vs the matter, pze thee holy Frier.
Fri. Sir Doncaster the Priest, and the proud Prior
Are stript and wounded in the way to Bawcrey,
And if there goe not spedie remedie,
Theyl die, theyl die in this extremite.

Rob. Alas, direct vs tothat wretched place:
I loue mine uncle, though he hateth mee.

Fri. My weede I cast to keepe them from the colde,
And linnen gentle girle toze all her smocke,
The blodie issue of their wounds to stoppe.

Rob. Will you goe with vs, my good Lord of Ely?
Ely. I will, and euer praise thy perfect charitie.
Enter Prince John, solus, in greene, bowe and arrowes.
John. Why this is somewhat like, now may I sing,
As did the Wakefield Pinder in his note;
At Michaelmas commeth my couenant out,
My master giues me my fee:
Then Robin Ile weare thy Kendall greene,
And wend to the greene woodde with thee,
But for a name now, John it must not bee,
Alreadie little John on him attends.
Greenelease? Nay surely there's such a one alreadise:
Well, Ile be Wodnes, hap what happen may.

Enter Scathlocke,

R. 2

Pere

THE DOWN-TAN OR ROBIN

Here comes a greene cote(good lucke be my guide)
Some sodaine shifft might helpe me to prouide.

Scath. What fellow William, did you meeete our master?

John. I did not meeete him yet my honest friend.

Scath. My honest friend? why, what a termme is here?

My name is Scathlocke , man, and if thou be
No other than thy garments shewe to mee,
Thou art my fellowe, though I knowe thee not.
What is thy name? when wert thou entertainid?

Ioh. My name is Woodner, and this very day,
My noble master, earle of Huntington,
Did giue mee both my fee and limeric.

Scath. Your noble master, earle of Huntington?

Ile lay a crowne you are a counterfeit,
And that you knowe, lacks money of a Noble.
Did you receive your livery and fee,

And never heard our orders read vnto you?

What was the oath was giuen you by the Frier?

Ioh. Who? Frier Tuck? Enter Frier Tuck.

Scath. I doe not play the lyer:

For he comes here himselfe to shewe.

Iohn. Scathlock farewell, I will away.

Scath. See you this arrowe? it saies nay.
Through both your sides shall fly this feather,
If presently you come not hither.

Fri. Now heauens true liberalitie
Fall ever for his charitie,
Upon the heade of Robin Hoode,
That to his very foes doth good.
Lord God, how he lamentes the Prior,
And bathes his wounds against the fier.
Faire Marian, God requite it her,
Dotheuen as much for Doncaster,
Whome newly she hath laine in bed,
To rest his weary wounded head.

Scath. No Frier Tuck, knowe you this mate?

Fri.

EARL OF MUNTINGTON

Fri. What's hee?

Scath. He saith my master late,
Gave him his fee and livery.

Fri. It is a leasing, credit me.

How chance sir then you were not sworne?

John. What meane this groome and lozell Frier,
So sticke matters to inquire?
Had I a sword and buckler here,
You shold aby these questions deare.

Fri. Haist thou me so lad: lend him thine,
For in this busynesse here lyeth mine:
Now will I try this newcome guest.

Scath. I am his first man, Frier Tuck,
And if I faile and haue no lucke,
Then thor with him shal haue a plucke.

Fri. Be it so Scathlocke: holde thee lad,
No better weapons can be had:
The vewe doth them a litle rust:
But heare yee, they are tooles of trust.

John. Gramercy Frier for this gift,
And if thou come unto my chyld,
Ile make thee call thole fellowes fooles
That on their soes bessowe such coolies.

Scath. Come let vs too't.

Fight, and the Frier lookes on.
Fri. The youth is deluster and light,
He presleth Scathlocke with his might:
Now by my beades to doe him right,
I thinke he be some tryed knight.

Scath. Stay, let vs breach.

Ioh. I will not stay:
If you leane, Frier, come away.

Scath. I pre the Frier holde him play.

Fri. Frier Tuck will doe the best he may.

Fight. Enter Marian.

Mari. Whay, what a noyse of swordes is here?

Fellowes, and fight our bower so neere?
Scath Mistresse, he is no man of yours,
That fightes so fast with Frier Tucke:
But on my worde he is a man,
As good for strength as any can.

Mar. Indeede hee's more than common men can be,
In his high heart there dwels the bloode of kings.
Goe call my Robin, Scathlock: its Prince John.
Scath, Mistresse I will, I pray part the fray. Exit.
Mar. I pre thee goe, I wil doe what I may.
Frier I charge thee holde thy hand.

Fri. Nay yonker, to your tacking stand.
What all amoyt, wil you not fight?

Ioh. I yield, unconquered by thy might:
But by Matildas gloriouſ sight.

Fri. Mistresse, he knowes you: what is hee?

Ioh. Like to amazing wonder she appeares,
And from her eye, flies loue unto my heart,
Attended by suspicioſ thoughts and feares,
That numme the vigor of each outward part:
Only my sight hath all sacietie,
And fulnesse of delight, viewing her deſtie.

Mar. But I haue no delight in you Prince John.

Fri. Is this Prince John?
Give me thy hand, thou art a proper man,
And for this moynings worke, by Saints abore,
Be euer ſure of Frier Tucks true loue.

Ioh. Be not offendeth that I touch thy shyne
Make this hand happie, let it folde in thine.

¶ Enter Robin Hood, Fitzwater, Ely, Warman.

Rob. What lawcie wodman Marian stands so neere?
Ioh. A wodman Robin, that would ſtrike your deere,
With all his heart. Nay never looke ſo ſtrange,
You ſee this fickle world, is full of change:
John is a ranger, man, compeld to range.

Fitz,

Earle of Huntington.

Fitz. You are young, wilde Lord, & wel may trauel bear.

Ioh. What, my olde friende Fitzwater, are you there?

And you Lord Ely? and old best betrusted?

Then I perceiue that to this geere we must.

A messe of my good friends, whiche of you soure

Will purchase thanks by yielding to the King,

The bodie of the rash rebellious John?

Will you Fitzwater?

Fitz. No John, I desir,

To stain my old hands in thy youthfull blode,

Ioh. You will Lord Ely, I am sure you will.

Ely. Be sure young man, my age means thee no ill.

John. O you will haue the praise, bicaue Robin Hood:

The lustie outlawe, Lord of this large wodde,

Hee'l lead a kings sonne, prisoner to a king,

And bid the brother smite the brother deade.

Rob. My purpose you haue much misconstrued:

Prince John, I would not for the wide worlds wealth

In curse his Maestie but doe my best,

To mitigate his wrath, if he be mou'd.

Ioh. Will none of you then here's one I dare say,

That from his childehoode, knowes how to betray:

Warman, will not you helpe to hinder all you may.

War. With what I haue beene, twit me not my Lord.

My olde sins at my soule I doe detest.

Ioh. Then that he came this way, prince John was blest.

Forgiue me Ely, pardon mee Fitzwater:

And Robin, to thy hands my selfe I yield.

Rob. And as my heart, from hurt I will thee shielde:

Enter Much, running.

Mu. Hasted fly, hide ye mistresse, we al shall be taken.

Rob. Why, whats the matter? (of horses.)

Much. The king, the king, & twelue and twenty score

Rob. Peace soole, we haue no cause from him to fly,

Enter Scarlet, little John.

Ioh. Scarlet and I were hunting on the plaine.

THE DOWN-TANKE

To vs came royll Richard from his traine
(For a great traine of his is hard at hand)
And questiond vs, if we seru'd Robin Hoode:
I saide wee did: and then his Maiestie,
Putting this massie chaine about my necke,
Said what I shame to say, but toyde to heare:
Let Sarlet tell it, it befits not mee.

Scar. Quoth our good king, thy name is little Iohn,
And thou hast long time seru'd earle Huntington:
Because thou lefft him not in miserie,
A hundred markes I giue thee yearelief fee,
And from henceforth, thou shalt a squier bee.

Much, O Lord what luck had I to runne away?
I shold haue bene made a knight, or a lady sure.
Scar. Goe, said the king, and to your master say,
Richard is come to call him to the court.

And with his kingly presence chase the clouds
Of griefe and sorrow, that in mistie shades,
Haue vaild the honour of earle Huntington,
Rob. Now God preserue him, hye you backe agayne,
And guide him, least in by-paths he mistake.
Much. fetch a richer garment for my father:

Good Frier Tuck, I pre thee rouse thy wits.
Warwan, visit myne uncle and sir Doncaster,
See if they can come forth to grace our showe.
Gods pittie marian, let your linnen waite,
Thankes my Lord Chancelloy, you are well prepar'd,
And good Prince Iohn, since you are all in greene,
Disbaine not to attend on Robin Hoode:
Frolick I pray, I trust to doe yee good.
Welcume good uncle, welcume sir Doncaster,
Say, will yee sit, I feare yee cannot stand.

Pri. Yes, very well.
Rob. Why, cheerely cheerely then.
The trumpet sounds, the king is now at hand:
Lords, yeomen, maids, in decent order stand.

The

EARLE OF HUNTINGTON.

The trumpets sound, the while Robin places them.
Enter first, bare-heade, little Iohn and Scarlet; likewise
Chester, and Lester, bearing the sword and scepter; the King follow crowned, clad in green: after him Queene mother, after her Salsbury and Richmonde. Scarlet and Scatlocke turne to Robin Hood; who with all his copany kneele downe and cry.

All. God sau King Richard, Lord preserue your Grace.

King. Thanks all, but chievely, Huntington, to thee.

Arise poore earle, stand vp, my late lost sonne,
And on thy shoulders let me rest my armes,
That haue bene toyled long with heathen warres:
True piller of my state, right Lord indeede,
Whose honour shineth in the deuine of neede,
I am euen full of ioy, and full of woe;
To see thee glad: but sad to see thee so.

Rob. O that I could powre out my sorrie in prayers,
And praises for this kingly curteisie.
Doe not, dread Lord, grieue at my lowe estate:
Neuer so rich, neuer so fortunate,
Was Huntington as now himselfe he findes.
And to approue it, may it please your Grace,
But to accept such presents at the hand
Of your poore servant, as he hath prepar'd,
You shall perceiue, the Emperour of the East,
Whom you contended with at Babilon,
Had not such presents to present you with.

King. Art thou so rich? sweet let me see thy gifts.

Rob. First take againe this Jewell you had lost,
Aged Fitzwater, banished by Iohn.

King. A lemme indeede: no Prince hath such a one.

Good, good old man, as welcome unto mee,
As coole fresh ayre, in heats extremitie.

Fitz. And I as glad to kisse my Soueraignes hand,
As the wackt swimmer, when he feeleth the land.

Qu. Welcome Fitzwater, I am glad to see you.

L

Fitz.

THE CROWN

Fitz. I thanke your Grace: but let me hug these twain,
Lester and Richmond, Christes swoyne champions,
That follow'd Richard in his holy warre.

Richm. Noble Fitzwater, thanks, & welcome both.

Lest. O God how glad I am to see this Lord!

I cannot speake :but welcome at a woyde.

Rob. Heretake good Ely in your royll hands,
Who fled from death, and most vnciuill bands.

Kin. Robin, thy gifts exceede; Morton my Chancellour!
In this man glu st thou holinesse and honour.

Ely. Indede he gives me, and he gaue me life,
Preseruing me from fierce pursuing foes,
When I too blame, had wrought him many woes:
With me he likewise did preserue this scale,
Which I surrender to your maiestie.

Kin. Keepe it good Ely, keepe it still for me.

Rob. The next faire Jewell that I will presente
Is richer thanboth these, yet in the soyle,
My gratioues Lord, it hath a soule default:
Which if you pardon, boldly I protest,
It will in value farre exceede the rest.

Ioh. Thats me hemeanes, yfaith my turne is next.
He calles me foile, yfaith I feare a foile.
Well, tis a mad Lord, this same Huntington;

Rob. Here is Prince Iohn your brother, whose renolt,
And folly in your absence, let me craue,
With his subission may be buried.
For he is now no more the man he was,
But duecifull in all respects to you.

Kin. Pray God it prooue so. Wel good Huntington,
For thy sake pardond is our brother Iohn,
And welcome to vs in all heartie loue.

Rob. This last I giue, as tenants do their lands,
With a surrender, to receiue againe,
The same into their owne possession:
No Marian, but Fitzwaters chaste Matilda:

The

The precious Jewell that poore Huntington,
Doth in this world hold as his best esteeme-
Althoogh with one hand I surrender her,
I holde the other, as one looking still,
Richard returnes her: so I hope he will.

Kin. Els God so: bid: receiue thy Marian backe,
And never may your loue be separate,
But florish fairely to the vermost date.

Rob. Now please my king to enter Robins bower,
And take such homely welcome as he findes,
It shall be reckened as my happinelle.

Kin. With all my heart: then as combined friends,
Goe we togither, here all quarrelles ends. Exeunt.

Maner Sir John Elcam, and Skelton

S. Joh. Then Skelton here I see you will conclude,
Skel. And reason good: haue we not held too long?
S. Joh. No in goods aduaresse, I dare gage my life,

Highnesse will accept it very kindly.

at I assure you, he expects withall,

To see the other matters tragically,

That followe in the processe of the storie,

Wherein are many a sad accident,

Able to make the strictest minde relent:

I neede not name the points, you knowe them all.

From Marians eye shall not one teare be shed?

Skelton, pfaith tis not the fashion.

The King must greene, the Queene must take it ill:

Ely must mourne, aged Fitzwater weepe,

Prince John, the Lords: his yeomen must lament,

And wryng their wofull hands, for Robins woe.

Then must the sicke man fainting by degrees,

Speake hollowe wordes, and yield his Marian,

That maid Matilda, to her fathers hands:

And glie her, with king Richards full consent,

His lands, his goods, late seazd on by the Prior,

Now by the Prior's treason made the kings.

Skelton, there are a many other things,
That aske long time to tell them lineally:
But ten times longer will the action be.

Skel. Sir John, yfaith I knowe not what to doo:
And I confesse that all you say is true.
Will you doe one thing for me, craue the king
To see two partz: say tis a prettie thing:
I know you can doe much, if you excuse mee,
While Skelton liues, Sir John be holde to vse mee.

S. Joh. I will perswade the king: but how can you
Perswade all these beholders to content?

Skel. Stay sir John Elcam; what to them I say,
Deliver to the king, from mee, I pray.

Well iudging hearers, for a while suspence
Your censures of this Platier unfinisht end:
And Skelton promises for this offence,
The second part shall presently be pend:
There shall you see, as late my friend did note,
King Richards revels at earle Roberts bower,
The purpos'd mirth, and the performed mone,
The death of Robin, and his murderer,
For interest of your stay, this will I add:
King Richards voyage backe to Austria;
The swifte returned tydings of his death,
The maner of his royll funerall.

Then Iohn shall be a lawfull crowned king,
But to Matilda beare unlawfull loue,
Aged Firzwater: finall banishment:
His pitionis end, of power teares to moue
From marble pillars. The Catastrophe
Shall shewe you faire matildas Tragedie,
Who (hunning Iohns pursute, became a Nunne,
At Dumwoode Abbey, where she constantly
Chose death to sauue her spotlesse chastitie.
Take but my word, and if I faile in this,
Then let my paines be basled with a hisse.
